Bocock Lists 10 Points for Improvement At Gallinger

New Buildings, More Personnel Among Suggestions Offered By Hospital Head

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer

Ten recommendations for improvement of conditions at Gallinger Hospital were made yesterday by Superintendent Edgar A. Bocock at the request of Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon, chairman of the subcommittee investigating the municipal institution, in the closing session of public hearings.

"Talk as if you were talking to your fairy godmother," Holman urged. "For the future welfare of the community, tell me what you would do if you could. I think it is up to us as a Congress to provide the solution."

Lists Recommendations

Dr. Bocock's recommendations were:

1. Construction of a new laundry so that the entire domestic service building could be reorganized and the kitchens enlarged.
2. Procurement of additional personnel, including extra dietitians to scrutinize the food served in every ward at every meal and cater to individual appetites.
3. Reconditioning of present psychiatric wards and addition of one building for humane, modern treatment.
4. Razing of the old tuberculosis building and construction of new quarters for the 75 patients now housed there.
5. Erection of a new doctors' home suitable for young professional men, with dining rooms to feed them properly.
6. Special ward, fully equipped, for treatments to violently insane patients.
7. New children's ward.
8. New pediatric ward.
9. Incineration unit for combustible garbage.
10. Addition of two assistant superintendents, one administrative and one professional.

Surprise Move

"With such improvements," Dr. Bocock declared, "I feel certain that the hospital could eliminate criticism."

"You'd better consider all these items carefully and submit them to me in writing so that nothing

Escaped Slayer Returns to Jail Of His Own Accord

Broadus Mungo, 21-year-old Negro murderer who escaped from the District Jail Wednesday night by scaling an eight-foot wall, walked back into the jail with a relative yesterday, "pretty ashamed of the whole business," A. E. Green, jail superintendent, said.

"He'd been right here in town all the time," Green said. "He had found that things were too hot for him, I suppose, and he went to the home of this relative and had the relative call us to say he was coming back.

"Because he returned voluntarily we didn't put him in solitary confinement, but his case will be presented to the U. S. Attorney General, and a maximum of five years can be added to his sentence for escaping."

The prisoner is serving an 8-to-24-year term for the slaying of Ernest F. Bowling, 28, of 1007 20th st. nw., on February 1, 1941. He was transferred from Lorton Reformatory to the District Jail on a work assignment three months ago.

Treasury Tax Demand Faces 8-Billion Cut

Congress Won't Vote Over 4 Billions New Revenue, Leaders Say

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Four billion dollars in new taxes are likely to prove Congress' top offer as a substitute for the Administration's original 12-billion-dollar demand for new revenue, Capitol leaders predicted yesterday.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau will take the Administration program, or suggestions, to Capitol Hill Monday. Recent revisions in the program were reported to have brought its total to slightly under 11 billion dollars, with at least 7 billions from individuals in outright increases and refundable taxes.

As part of the speedup in hearings aimed at finishing the tax bill by January 1, Ways and Means Chairman Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina, fixed October 11 as the final deadline for receiving applications from individuals to testify on the tax program.

Doughton's committee earlier in the day voted to simplify tax returns next March 15 by requiring individuals to take their postwar credits under the victory tax currently, instead of letting them accumulate until after the war.

It was emphasized that for most taxpayers, the maneuver would mean neither gain nor loss. Victory tax provisions now offer the individual a credit—40 per cent of the amount of the tax for married persons, 25 per cent of the amount for single persons.

Under present law, the credit can be taken only if the individual has bought bonds, or paid debts or paid for insurance in an equivalent amount. In claiming the credit, the individual could apply to re-

WLB Approves Incentive Pay Experiment

Grumman Factory Selected for Test Of Plant-Wide Plan

The War Labor Board yesterday announced its approval of a new plant-wide type of incentive pay system as an "experiment" at the plant of the Grumman Aircraft Engineering Co., Bethpage, N. Y.

Under the plan, which was submitted by the company, workers will receive a 1 per cent wage increase for each 2 per cent increase in production, with all employes in the plant sharing in the increase. An output of .48 pounds of airframe weight per man-hour actually worked was adopted as the base for calculating the increased production.

Dr. George W. Taylor, vice chairman of the board, cautioned against regarding adoption of incentive wage plans as a production-increasing "panacea," but commented that there were prospects of a 10 to 15 per cent increase in overall production at the Grumman plant, where production already is good.

Two Resolutions Adopted

The board also made public the text of two unanimously adopted resolutions on the subject: (1) that the board would not approve incentive pay plans unless they are submitted voluntarily and approved by the union as well as by management in cases where a union has bargaining rights, and (2) that the board would determine only whether a proposed plan conforms with the national wage stabilization program, but would not pass on technical production aspects of it.

Taylor disclosed that the board has before it approximately 800 re-

Outgrowth of Tawes Case

Justice Department Studies Libel Case of Rives Matthews

By Lin Celdon
Post Staff Writer

Assistant Attorney General Thomas Clark last night authorized a statement that the Department of Justice is giving serious consideration to the case of Maryland publisher Rives Matthews who was indicted for criminal libel after he printed articles charging State Comptroller J. Millard Tawes with violation of the pleasure driving ban. Tawes was found guilty by the State OPA and his occupational and personal coupons withdrawn after his local board had exonerated him.

The announcement followed closely the statement of Senator Willis (Republican) of Indiana, yesterday who assailed "elements back of the indictment" when he became a member of the "Free Matthews Committee" consisting of two other Senators and a veteran Representative.

The statement by Clark was made in his office after conferences with other Department of Justice officials, after Elisha Hanson, chief counsel for the American Newspaper Publishers Association, that came to Matthews' defense, had announced the trial of the 37-year-old publisher had been put off to the April, 1944, term of Somerset County Circuit Court. Matthews publishes the Somerset News in this county.

Reason for the extended postponement, Hanson said, was because the court was unable to grant a trial date sooner as it will not be in session until then. Previously, Edgar Jones, associate counsel, a resident of Somerset, on behalf of Hanson had asked for a postponement to the end of Octo-

Rain Soaks Battlefields

By James M. Long
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Saturday), Oct. 2.—Soviet troops battered through German defenses in White Russia to reach the Pronya River, 29 miles from Mogilev, Moscow announced today, while the Germans claimed a major defense victory in the south after a bitter five-day battle.

Fall rains were drenching the White Russian battlefield as the Russians rolled through 460 more towns and hamlets, killed more than 5500 Germans and won the town of Cherikov in a new crossing of the Sozh River.

In a number of sectors, the Russians reached the Pronya, which branches off from the Sozh River east of Mogilev, said the Moscow midnight bulletin recorded by the Soviet monitor here.

This marked an advance of 30 miles from captured Krichev and 17 miles beyond Cherikov.

Germans Suffer Heavy Losses

The Germans retreated with heavy losses, abandoning guns and trucks, the Russians said.

Other drives in White Russia—the last Soviet Republic before Poland—were aimed at Gomel and Vitebsk.

In the Gomel fighting, German fortified defense lines with numerous blockhouses and pill boxes stalled off capture of the city. Soviet assault groups broke through some of the defended areas, however, killing 1000 Germans and seizing food and ammunition stores. The Russians were reported within 11 miles of the city several days ago.

The Germans hurled an artillery barrage and several counterattacks against the advancing Russians in the Vitebsk area, but the Soviet troops kept attacking and in a determined smash took a stubbornly defended height, the Russians said.

The communique, for the second day, gave no details of fighting at Kiev or elsewhere on the 700-mile front.

Nazis Tell of Russian Defeat

German broadcasts, however, made much of a battle they said had ended with a Russian defeat in the southern Ukraine. The high command communique said the Russians lost 140 out of 250 tanks in a mass attack near Zaporozhe on the Dnieper River bend.

Flying Fortress Is Shot Down By Antiaircraft In Switzerland

By International News Service

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Oct. 1.—American Flying Fortresses and Liberators from northwest Africa attacked targets near Munich, Germany, and Vienna, Austria, today in the first Africa-base raid against the greater Reich.

The four-engined Fortresses roared over the Alps to batter unidentified targets in the Munich region, setting a record for the longest flight from northwest African bases by negotiating an 1800-mile round-trip mission.

Liberator bombers simultaneously attacked the Messerschmitt fighter factories at Wiener Neustadt, 25 miles south of Vienna, an official air communique revealed.

Clouds Prevent Observation

Clouds over both targets prevented accurate observation of bombing results, said the communique, disclosing that both the Fortress and Liberator formations encountered enemy fighters.

The Liberators that attacked Wiener Neustadt, site of plants manufacturing air frames for Messerschmitts, consisted of planes of the Eighth U. S. Army Air Force, ordinarily based in Britain but flying under the command of the northwest African Air Forces, and planes formerly with the Ninth Air Force in the Middle East. Returning airmen said despite the cloud screen over Wiener Neustadt, many of their bombs were seen falling in the target area.

Swiss Shoot Down Fort

Bern, Oct. 1 (AP).—An American Flying Fortress, one of a group raiding central Europe, was shot down today by neutral Switzerland's antiaircraft fire when the American and German fighters engaged in a battle over eastern Switzerland, the Swiss officially announced tonight.

The Swiss said their territory was bombed by foreign aircraft—presumably the Flying Fortresses—which attacked the frontier area. Only property damage was reported in the first announcement.

Forty-three planes flew over the Swiss frontier about noon. The German fighters engaged the Americans and several planes crashed. It was not made clear whether these were German or American.

Swiss antiaircraft fire then opened up and "one Flying Fortress was shot dow for certain."

(A German broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press, said five Flying Fortresses were shot down over the western part of the Alps and another nine so heavily damaged they had to abandon formation.

Mystery Torpedo?

Convoy Loses at Least 10 Ships In 10-Day Battle With U-Boats

By International News Service

An East Coast Canadian Port, Oct. 1.—A terrific ten-day battle between a westbound Allied convoy and packs of German submarines in the North Atlantic late in September was described today by survivors who expressed belief the Nazis are using a deadly new-type torpedo.

The convoy suffered severe losses, including the Canadian destroyer St. Croix, one of the four-stack destroyers acquired by Britain from the United States in September, 1940, which was sunk with the loss of all but one of her 147-man crew.

An unrevealed number of other ships, including merchantmen and escorts, also were sunk. But at least two U-boats were believed destroyed and six or more damaged and possibly destroyed.

[It was reported in London, according to the Associated Press, that the corvette Polyanthus and the frigate Itchen were lost in the same action.]

One survivor estimated that at least three escort vessels were sunk in addition to the St. Croix, and about six freighters, including two American Liberty ships.

The manner in which the St. Croix was blown up led many to feel the Nazis are employing a new and more powerful torpedo.

One officer said the St. Croix went "up in one blast."

"I've never seen an explosion at sea to equal that one," he said. "We were about 6 miles away at the time. After the explosion we could see a few lights twinkling on the water. They might have been survivors on a raft, but when we reached the scene all we found was a bunch of wreckage and one lifebelt with a light on it."

The U-boat packs dogged the Allied shipping fleet all the way to Death, Destruction

By Edward Kennedy

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Oct. 1.—Naples, the biggest city and most important port yet to fall to the Allies, was captured today by the American Fifth Army as the bulk of its German defenders scurried northward for a new stand somewhere between the charred and looted metropolis and Rome.

[The British radio, heard by CBS and reported by the International News Service, said Fifth Army spearheads already are pushing on from Naples in a drive aimed at Aversa, 11 miles to the northeast, and Capua, 10 miles north of Aversa.]

(President Roosevelt said the Allied objective was to free Rome, the Vatican and the Pope, much in the manner of a crusade.)

A British armored column, accompanied by Americans, fought vigorous resistance along the road flanking the Gulf of Naples to the outskirts of the city last night. The Germans moved out during the night and the Allies entered the city through its eastern gate an hour after dawn this morning. They picked up the arms and iron center of Torre Annuziata en route.

The Allied drive along the coast was aided by a 10-mile advance by Americans forming Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's right wing to Avellino yesterday, which imperiled the German position in the whole Naples area.

Great Port Open to Allies

The victory opened one of the Mediterranean's greatest ports to the Allies and, when the harbor is cleared of extensive German demolitions and scuttled ships, will facilitate the Allied supply problem. Authorities said the port would be able soon to unload cargoes from deep draft ships. The victory also put within Allied grasp numerous excellent airfields 15 to 25 miles north of the city.

It still is uncertain where the Germans will make their next stand. It is obvious that they will attempt more delaying actions between Naples and Rome, 135 railway miles north.

In this area there are fewer mountains, but there are rivers. Twenty miles north of Naples is the U. S. Bombers Sink 3 Ships In Jap Convoy

11 Vessels Believed On Way to Aid Foe Trapped at Vila

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific (Saturday), Oct. 2.—American Liberator bombers sank two Japanese merchant ships and a destroyer, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today, when the big planes surprised an 11-ship enemy convoy believed attempting to sneak down to trapped Japanese forces at Vila, on Kolombangara Island, in the New Georgia group.

A large cargo ship, hit with two bombs, capsized and sank. The second was destroyed by a large explosion which was followed by fires visible 20 miles. The destroyer exploded after four direct hits. It had thrown up heavy antiaircraft fire against the attacking planes.

A fourth large vessel received two direct hits on its stern but was still afloat when the planes left.

While the destination of the convoy was not known definitely, it was heading in the general direction of Vila, where reports from the South Pacific said the Japanese have been evacuating troops by barge under cover of darkness. The Japanese had an estimated 10,000 troops there at one time.

The bombers, on reconnaissance, caught the convoy in Bougainville Strait in the northern Solo-

OPA Forced to Scrap Program For 9-to-10c Apple Price Ceiling

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

OPA's plan to establish a national retail price ceiling of 9 to 10 cents a pound on apples, announced September 13 by General Manager Chester Bowles, has been scrapped by War Food Administrator Marvin Jones following pressure from an apple industry committee including members of Congress, it was learned last night.

Under a new directive from Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson, the pricing agency now is working on regulations placing the ceiling at 10 to 11 cents, 1 cent higher than had been announced.

Since apples were but one among seven foods on which Bowles said OPA would place lower ceilings and rollbacks—to reduce the cost of living "2.3 per cent"—observers wondered whether this first retreat would be followed by six others. Also scheduled for price reductions were: oranges, onions, potatoes, lard, vegetable oils and peanut butter.

The apple industry committee said to have consulted with the WFA chief had the following members: Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia, himself a grower of apples on an extensive scale; Representatives Horan and Holmes (Republicans) of Washington, one of the leading apple-growing States; Reuben Benz of Washington, representing the Northwest Growers and Shipping Association; Henry W. Miller, jr., of West Virginia, representing the National Apple Planning Committee, and Samuel Fraser of Rochester, N. Y., representing the International Apple Growers Association.

Bowles announced the "rollback" plan at his second press conference and made it clear the Office of Economic Stabilization had so directed. The new program, he said, was even then "in the final stages."

Background and developments in the apple-pricing procedure yesterday were outlined as follows: Vinson instructed OPA to set grower maximum prices at parity plus 60 cents on each 48-pound box of the fruit, and use this to work out a regulation setting the national retail ceilings.

The apple industry committee appealed to OPA, but was told the agency was working on instructions "from the top." Then the committee called on Administrator Vinson, who was so impressed by its presentation he refused to sign the regulation—thus throwing the apple problem back to OES. Judge Vinson, with the new presentation before him, wrote a new directive charging OPA to set the grower maximums at parity plus 92 cents on the 48-pound box, which change would up the proposed ceiling by 1 cent a pound.

Using the prospective apple tonnage for this year, an OPA official estimated the increase would cost

Discussed With Churchill

Freedom of Air Is Indorsed By Roosevelt as U. S. Policy

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Freedom of the air to all nations with this country's airlines operated largely by private enterprise was indorsed as Government policy by President Roosevelt yesterday.

The President said that he discussed the matter with Prime Minister Churchill and felt that the British government head shared his views.

It was agreed, the President said, that there should be one reservation to freedom of the air—that each country should have control over the air travel within its own borders.

Thus, the Chief Executive explained, Canadian airlines might be allowed to refuel at Buffalo and Miami en route to the Bahamas or Puerto Rico, but would not be allowed to pick up passengers at Buffalo for Miami, a transportation job which would be done by exclusively American airlines.

The discussion of future airlanes was opened by a reporter who called attention to comments by Senators just returned from a 40,000-mile world tour that U. S.-built airports abroad will revert to foreign countries six months after the war. Senator Brewster, (Republican) of Maine, commented that this country would be left "holding the bag."

The President replied that the question had been considered for six or eight months, although no one had got down to a discussion of specific airports. He said that we were getting along on it.

Stalin Said to Have Rejected London As Meeting Place

By Frederick Kuh

London, Oct. 1.—Russia is reliably reported tonight to have politely rejected an American request to hold the three-power conference in London instead of in Moscow.

According to trustworthy American sources, President Roosevelt personally intervened in the preparations for the conference by cabling Premier Stalin and asking that the meeting place, already fixed as Moscow, be shifted to London. The reason the President gave was that the health of Secretary of State Cordell Hull made the longer journey undesirable.

Stalin's reply, while friendly and courteous, was stated to have said regretfully that a last-minute change of the scene would involve serious difficulty. The Soviet Premier made clear his government's hope that Hull would be able to attend the Moscow conference.

Allies Take Naples, Find City in Ruins

Volturno and above that is the Gargliano and its tributaries, the Liri and Sacco. Battles on the banks of all these streams are likely as the Allies push northward along the ancient Appian way to Rome.

There also is the question of whether the Germans will stand for battle at Rome. While the puppet Fascist government of Mussolini has reportedly declared Rome an open city, there has been no agreement by the Allies. If the German attitude toward Rome is anything like their conduct toward Neapolitans, the Eternal City may have bad days ahead.

Entered Naples at 8 A. M.

The Allies entered Naples at 8 a. m. A terse communique from General Eisenhower said simply:

"Troops of the Fifth Army have entered Naples and the city is reported clear of Germans."

Naples is in ruins and aflame.

The bulk of the five German divisions forming its defenses got away, but many rearguard formations, including some of the enemy's finest troops, were annihilated by the Allied avalanche.

For months, Naples was dealt blasting blows by Allied planes, especially Flying Fortresses, and shelled by warships.

Then the Germans proceeded with systematic demolitions, not only to deny anything of value to the onrushing Allies but to inflict vengeance on the Italians for surrendering unconditionally and irreparably shattering the Axis.

A dense pall of smoke has been hanging over Naples for days.

Latest reports say many bodies are buried beneath the debris. Others, including those of civilians and disarmed Italian soldiers assassinated by the Germans, still lie in the streets.

The tragedy which had befallen Naples, one of the world's most beautiful cities because of the scenic splendor of its bay and the mountains rising from the sea, approaches that which descended upon nearby Pompeii in ancient times when it was shaken by an earthquake, engulfed by a tidal wave and covered with lava by an eruption of Vesuvius.

Most of Populace Fled

Nine-tenths of the Neapolitans did not stay to see the last lurid days under the Germans. They fled to the hills long ago. Those who did remain lived under a reign of terror in which the Germans were shooting Italians and looting their homes.

The Germans burned down the University of Naples after four students had killed a German officer. They sacked the city's famous aquarium. Refugees reported that the nearby street was strewn with rare specimens of fish and a collection of octopi for which the institution was known.

One dispatch said the beautiful San Carlo Opera House had been burned.

The loss of Naples undoubtedly will compel the Germans to pull back farther in the central and Adriatic areas, where the Eighth Army is exerting steady pressure.

They already have abandoned the plain of Foggia, which extends 30 miles north of that great air center, but they still are ensconced in the mountains around Bonevento and Casteluccia. While holding out there they control the water supply for a large region of Southeastern Italy, including the cities of Bari, Brindisi and Taranto. The main water source of these Allied-held ports cannot be restored until the Germans are dislodged from the Southern Apennines and the aqueducts repaired.

Palaces Sacked

The Germans also curtailed the Naples water supply by demolitions before they left, causing a serious sanitary situation.

It still is uncertain whether the Germans pillaged the palace of the Prince of Piedmont in Naples. They sacked many other palaces.

The great harbor is a graveyard of sunken ships. But any port is an extremely difficult thing to destroy, even when demolitions are as extensive as those precipitated by the Germans. Naples will undoubtedly be in use as an Allied supply port, at least to a limited extent, before long.

Crews are ready to begin at once to remove the obstructions so supply vessels can be unloaded. Naples thus will supply the Allies with a big port of entry into the continent very near the front lines.

Its harbor perfectly complements the capture earlier this week of Foggia, which provided 13 intact airfields menacing all the Balkans and Italy and great parts of hitherto invulnerable southern Germany and Austria.

The Naples waterfront in happier days was a place where street singers and musicians went from one seaside restaurant to another to please the ubiquitous tourists with gay Neapolitan songs. Now it is a shambles. Almost every building facing the sea is wrecked or bears the ugly scars of war.

22 Days After Landing

Naples, a metropolis of 925,000 people, fell 22 days after the Fifth Army landed under heavy German fire on the beaches of the Gulf of Salerno, some 30 miles to the south.

Gruelling fighting has raged throughout that period, with the Allies all but driven back into the sea in the first few days. Then they had to batter their way through rugged mountain positions which gave all the advantage to the enemy.

But the Fifth Army was aided by an air force which had complete mastery of the air throughout the campaign, and by American and British navies which shelled enemy positions from the sea. Every important German position in the Naples area was shattered, and tonight the enemy still was in orderly retreat to the north.

Those same air forces struck heavily last night and yesterday beyond Naples. Their targets included Capua, 20 miles north on the Volturno River; Benevento, 31 miles northeast; bridges and roads around Piano, Amorisi, Castelvenere and Ausonia; and the railroad and high junction of Formia, 43 miles northwest.

Railroads, Bridges Pounded

Railroads and highway bridges in a 25-mile arc north and east of Naples were pounded throughout yesterday by medium and fighter-bombers. Some fliers encountered electrical storms. A flight of Lightning fighters swept over Bastia in support of Corsican, French and American troops mopping up that island 100 miles below France.

The North African air forces set a new record in bombs dropped in September, casting more than 15,000 tons on Italy in September. This shattered the July record when 12,800 tons were dropped during the Sicilian campaign.

Abandoning Foggia earlier this week, the Germans left behind great quantities of equipment including hundreds of packed parachutes and dozens of plane engines, an air force statement said. Scores of planes were left wrecked on the fields. The Germans flew away some of their serviceable planes and burned those they couldn't get into the air. One large transport plane still was smouldering when the British arrived.

The Foggia railway yards were blocked completely by Allied bombs and for more than 400 yards, the half dozen rail lines serving Foggia were littered with burned and damaged rolling stock. A locomotive had been sent plowing into the ground beside the rails by another bomb. Burned out coaches lay across two lines and at places rails were twisted into grotesque shapes. Streets inside Foggia were blocked with falling masonry and bomb hits. Road crossings were bomb-pitted.

Allied military government officers entered Naples today to start their staggering task. Scores of thousands of Neapolitans are expected to return shortly from their mountain hideaways.

The city's gas, streetcar and electric systems have been wrecked. Water is short and a large percentage of homes lie in ruins.

Naples was primarily a city of poor people living in tenements whose squalor contrasted sharply with the sublim beauty of the city's natural surroundings.

Getting food into the city for the poor will be a major problem.

The city is the capital of Campania Department, which embraces 5214 square miles and 3,700,000 people. In peace it was a gay and thriving city and its greatest industries were tourist traffic, shipping and manufacturing. Locomotives, engines, steel, glass, wool, linen and silk were manufactured there. During Mussolini's empire building days and during the North African campaign it was the chief embarkation point for that continent. The port is second only to Genoa for Italian sea traffic, normally handling up to 10 million tons annually.

Its anchorage is vast and well sheltered. It lies a third of the way up the Italian boot, 210 air miles north of Reggio Calabria.

More than 300 churches, numerous palaces and artistic monuments line its lava-paved streets. Its museum harbored treasured art laboriously dug from the ruins of Pompei and Herculaneum, destroyed in 79 A.D. by Vesuvius, which casts a perpetual dull glow over the city by night.

The destruction of Naples is so great that it will require years to restore "the pride of Southern Italy."

Ammunition Ship Exploded in Naples Harbor in Raid

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 1.—A steamer laden with ammunition exploded in the harbor of Naples after an American air raid, the Berlin radio said today.

The steamer first was set afire in the raid, and the blaze attracted many people whom the Italian police were unable to disperse, the broadcast said, continuing:

"Suddenly the steamer (apparently German) exploded, causing a great number of dead and considerable damage to harbor facilities. A report about the event was not published at the time in order not to give the enemy useful information."

The Berlin radio tried to portray burning and looting in Naples as exclusively the work of "Communist looters."

A propaganda broadcast said mobs, whose ranks were swelled by "liberated jailbirds and war prisoners," were first driven into the northern suburbs by the Nazis and their Fascist allies, but they succeeded in breaking into the city proper after dark.

The broadcast described a heavy battle between German and Fascist units and mobsters entrenched in the Camposanto Nuovo, one of the city's most famed cemeteries.

There, it said, the mobsters and "Communist looters" threw up defensive positions in family vaults after toppling monuments.

They were finally annihilated, the Nazis continued, but valuables had been stripped from family tombs.

Roosevelt Puts Fate Of Rome Up to Nazis

Allies Will Make Every Effort to Spare City, but Enemy Will Be Ousted, He Says

By Wilbur Mackey
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt, asserting that the Allies would liberate Rome and the Vatican, declared yesterday that every effort was being made to spare their historic edifices, and that if any harm comes to them the responsibility would rest entirely with the Germans.

Mr. Roosevelt said that the Eternal City has been definitely occupied by the Nazis, contrary to open city declarations of the Badoglio government and Mussolini's "Republican Fascist State," and he likened the American and British advance to a holy crusade.

The President opened his press conference by remarking that he had received a message from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower saying Allied troops had entered Naples.

Nazis May Have to Be Driven Out

Asked about Rome, he said that he had read press dispatches which reported that the Germans would make a stand on the Rome line of hills. That was doubtful, he continued, asserting that he doubted if even General Eisenhower himself knew where the Germans would make their next stand, because there are hills all the way to Rome. Natural advances were going to continue, he predicted.

Every effort was being made to prevent any damage to Rome and the Vatican, every effort to prevent fighting in Rome, he asserted, but he emphasized that the Germans were there, indicating that they might have to be driven out.

The Vatican is surrounded, Mr. Roosevelt added, with German troops in the colonnades around St. Peter's Cathedral and in St. Peter's Square, where press dispatches have reported that they face the Vatican's famed Swiss guards now in battle dress.

Some Elements of a Crusade

The President went on to say that he did not mean the Pope was in a state of siege, but then if everybody going in and out was inspected—well, you wouldn't call that freedom.

He said he hoped that Rome would be restored without any destruction, but he added that in the last analysis it would be the Germans and not ourselves who would decide whether they would make the city another Naples.

Mr. Roosevelt made his reference to a crusade when he said that some people had suggested that this was a crusade and he admitted that the American and British invasion had some of the elements. But he called the Allied advance a march looking forward to the liberation of Rome, the Vatican and the Pope.

Asked if he thought the Nazis would try to induce the Allies make Rome a battleground, thus participating in the destruction of Rome and its shrines, the President declared such a development was perfectly possible.

Yugoslavs Keep Fiume Under Fire

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 1.—The Italian Adriatic port of Fiume is under heavy fire from the Yugoslav liberation army which is throwing shells into the cit, from the hills behind the Susak, and heavy fighting continues in the Gorizia area of northern Italy, reports from the Yugoslav peoples' army said today.

A Berlin broadcast of a war correspondent's dispatch had admitted previously that the communications center of Gorizia had been virtually destroyed by artillery fire during the prolonged siege of its Nazi occupation troops.

A diplomatic setback for Hitler was seen by the Yugoslavs in his appointment of Hermann Hochbauer, a former Mayor of Vienna, as a sort of foreign minister to Belgrade. The appointment was regarded as giving the Serbs in the occupied area a quasi-diplomatic status at a time when Hitler is desperately trying to keep his satellites in the German fold.

Meanwhile, word came from the exiled Yugoslav government at Cairo that 300 Serb civilians had been executed by the Germans at Mladenovac two days ago in reprisal for a guerilla attack on a military camp near the town on September 26.

Berlin's account of the attack on Gorizia said that bands of Slovene and Croat irregulars, supported by Italians, were prevented from taking the area on September 22 only by the timely arrival of Nazi reinforcements.

A Berlin broadcast recorded here said a British army officer whom the Germans called "the notorious Maj. William Jones" was a leader of the Partisans.

Italians Threatened

On the Swiss-Italian Frontier, Oct. 1 (AP).—Italian soldiers who have taken to the hills of the Como area to organize guerilla warfare have been notified by their former Nazi commanders that they have until tomorrow to surrender or else face death.

Sidelights of War

Army Order Bars Newsmen From Going Ahead of Troops

Allied Headquarters In North Africa, Oct. 1 (AP).—War correspondents were ordered today by the Army to stop going ahead of combat troops.

The order followed a complaint by Army men that correspondents with the British Eighth Army in Italy had linked up with the Allied Fifth Army before combat forces had made the junction.

The order said such expeditions meant taking unjustified risks and were damaging to Army vehicles assigned to them as they frequently entailed leaving the road and driving over rough country.

The Army's order today followed the death yesterday of three British war correspondents who were killed by a shell from a German Mark III tank. Four American correspondents who had been standing with the British narrowly escaped the same fate.

New Nazi Labor Draft

Stockholm, Oct. 1 (AP).—The Germans have made all 16 and 17-year-old German boys and girls subject to labor service in the Baltic States, Poland and the Ukraine, Berlin dispatches said today.

The move was said to have followed new efforts to mobilize German women to meet the Reich's manpower shortage.

Peace Move Reported

London, Oct. 1 (INS).—The London Daily Mirror tonight quoted "strong reports" that the Hungarian government has made peace overtures to the United Nations.

U-Boats Sink Nine Ships in Convoy

Canada, through heavy seas and fog. One survivor called the battle "a close second to Murmansk-run fights."

"They stuck with us like leeches. They picked on our escorts just as much as on the merchant ships."

The first merchantman was sunk on Saturday, September 18, only a few minutes after Prime Minister Churchill had announced to the world that not a single Allied ship had been lost to U-boats in the North Atlantic for four months.

On Monday two U.S. Liberty ships were hit within a few moments of each other, one breaking in two and sinking almost immediately. The second stayed afloat four hours. All hands were saved.

A woman stowaway was among the survivors. She was Dommenellia James, 19-year-old West Indies Negro, who had been hidden aboard one of the merchant ships by a Negro crew member.

Nazis Claim 35 Allied Sinkings

London, Oct. 1 (AP).—The German news agency, DNB, declared in a broadcast today that the German navy sank 18 Allied merchantmen totaling 113,200 tons during September.

U-boats accounted for 88,700 tons of this figure, the broadcast said.

In the same period, it was claimed, 17 Allied destroyers were sunk and three destroyers and a cruiser were damaged.

There was no confirmation of these figures from Allied sources.

mons the night of September 28 and morning of September 29.

It was assumed in the absence of complete reports that the balance of the convoy scattered and failed to reach its destination.

MacArthur's morning communique also announced that 90 Japanese were killed in an attempt to escape from Vella Lavella which American troops occupied shortly after the capture of Munda air field on New Georgia.

Finschhafen Noose Tightened

The desperate Japanese, in an attempt to supply their forces at Vella Lavella, have turned to planes which are dropping supplies there. Vella Lavella lies between Kolombangara and Bougainville.

Meanwhile, Australian fighting men tightened their noose of men and guns around the village of Finschhafen on the northeast coast of New Guinea.

The communique said the Australians were pressing in from three points which would place their nearest forces less than half a mile from the town site.

Sharp fighting broke out between Australians and Japanese in the Markham Valley, approximately 60 miles from Madang, another Japanese strong point on the northeast New Guinea coast.

The communique reported 45 Japanese were killed in fighting accompanying the advance of our forces in the direction of Madang.

This force, which was landed from air transports September 18 in the Markham Valley, 60 miles northwest of Lae, where it seized the village of Kaiapit, now has reached the Ramu River, which flows through a valley behind Madang. The advancing troops are approximately 60 miles south of Madang.

In an attempt to lighten the pressure of the Australians around Finschhafen, the Japanese sent their planes over in raiding sorties aimed at personnel around Satelberg, but the communique said the raids were ineffective.

Africa-Based Craft Raid Munich Area

Reuters, said British and American planes flew in successive waves over the southeast part of Hungary this afternoon in a raid which apparently had no connection with the Swiss report. The Hungarians said the bulk of the plains avoided Hungary on their return trip.)

The Swiss located the bombings as at the Canton of Grisons, the easternmost canton of Switzerland. Air raid alarms were sounded in Bellinzona, Chur, Glarus and St. Gallen.

The announcement failed to explain over which Swiss frontier the action occurred. The towns listed all were in the eastern area adjacent to enemy territory in both Germany and Italy.

Harriman Named Envoy to Moscow

White House Asks Confirmation of Rich Industrialist

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

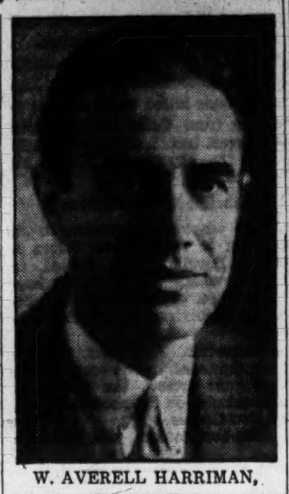
W. Averell Harriman, heir to 100 million dollars, who has played an important war role as Lend-Lease "expediter" in London, was nominated yesterday to be United States Ambassador to Soviet Russia.

In naming Harriman to succeed 71-year-old Admiral William H. Standley in the Moscow post, President Roosevelt apparently completed preparations for the momentous conferences soon to start between the big three of the Allies—the United States, Great Britain and Russia.

Acceptance of Admiral Standely's resignation, based on his desire not to spend another severe winter in Moscow, was announced yesterday.

Harriman, a 51-year-old New Yorker, who broke away from the Republican Party in 1928 to vote for Alfred E. Smith and later joined the New Deal, was the second rich industrialist to be tapped by President Roosevelt for an important diplomatic post in the space of a week.

Edward R. Stettinius, jr., named as Undersecretary of State last Saturday, was confirmed by the Senate on Thursday. Confirmation of Harriman is expected to come just as speedily.



W. AVERELL HARRIMAN.

Business Leadership

Persons close to the White House say that the selection of Harriman and Stettinius means that President Roosevelt is convinced that, in dealings with Russia, hard-headed American businessmen are likely to be much more effective than professional diplomatists or men who look at Russia from an ideological standpoint.

Wendell Willkie and others who have talked to Marshal Joseph Stalin share this conviction. They say that the blunt-spoken Russian leader has the greatest admiration for America's record in the industrial field, and is much more interested in our industrialists than he is in the so-called "parlor pinks."

Ambassador-elect Harriman has been to Russia three times. He made his first visit as a businessman before the war. A couple of months after the German invasion in 1941, he flew to Moscow as head of an American Mission on Aid to Russia. He went back again with Prime Minister Churchill in 1942.

Reporting to President Roosevelt at Hyde Park after his return in 1941, Harriman said he had "great confidence" in Russia's ability to stand up against the Germans. This was at a time when many were predicting that Russia was doomed.

Expected at Conference

When he got back from his 1942 visit he said that Russia's unshaken confidence was based on two things—confidence in herself and confidence in her Allies—"particularly in the United States."

"Their hope springs from us," he said. "They feel sure that some time, early they hope, we will be fighting the Germans on another front and will thus divert some of the weight of the German striking power . . ."

Harriman—and perhaps Stettinius also—is expected to accompany Secretary of State Hull on his imminent trip to Europe to confer with Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Foreign Commissar V. Molotov.

This conference will pave the way for one between President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Marshal Stalin—a conference which Mr. Churchill "confidently hopes" will take place before the New Year.

The tall, good-looking and somewhat stooped Harriman has done a vast amount of traveling since the war started. He has crossed the Atlantic 16 times, and has been a background figure at all of the historic Roosevelt-Churchill meetings: on a warship off Newfoundland, here in Washington, at Casablanca and more recently at Quebec.

Son of E. H. Harriman, a tycoon who once controlled 60,000 miles of the Nation's railroads, he attended Groton and Yale and then went to work for his father's principal line, the Union Pacific. He started at the bottom in greasy overalls and worked his way up to purchasing manager.

Later, while retaining his large railroad interests, he became a shipbuilder and ship operator, opened up the resort at Sun Valley, Idaho, and joined with Vincent Astor and others in developing Newsweek Magazine.

Active in Sports

A member of the Wall Street house of Brown Brothers, Harriman & Co., he was reported to have done better than most bankers in riding out the depression that began in 1929.

In the field of sports, Harriman has been a leading rowing coach, a crack polo player, and a trainer of champion Labrador Retrievers. He also shares Secretary of State State Hull's love of croquet.

Harriman, known in the early days as the No. 1 spokesman for big business in Washington, is credited with bringing William M. Jeffers, recently resigned rubber czar and a long list of other businessmen here to help run the war.

He himself came to Washington at the very outset of the New Deal, was a special assistant administrator in the NRA in 1934, then became chairman of the business advisory council of the Department of Commerce. Once the war started in Europe, he joined Stettinius and others in starting what has now become the War Production Board. Then in 1941 he went to London as lend-lease "expediter"—a tag given him by President Roosevelt.

London Report

U. S., Russia Britain Call War Council

By John F. Chester
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Oct. 1.—Russia's brilliantly successful offensive on the Eastern Front—with all its immense implications for the whole course and duration of the war—has led to a definite decision for early and intimate American-British-Soviet military staff discussions, even in advance of the forthcoming three-power diplomatic meeting.

This was learned today from a non-British source.

The rush of events on the fighting fronts—at a pace that had not been foreseen—has now made it plain that a meeting here will have a military flavor more marked than had appeared likely only a few weeks ago.

It now is very probable that Russian staff officers will participate in it; in fact, that military men of all three countries will take part not only in a general conference along with their diplomatic chiefs, but have their own sessions among themselves.

The London press today printed reports that Gen. George C. Marshall, himself, the prospective Allied commander-in-chief for the mortal blows being prepared against the enemy, probably would come here with Secretary of State Cordell Hull in the likely event that this is the scene of the big three meeting.

The probable sequence of events promises to go about like this:

First, a meeting within two weeks of high American and British officers primarily concerned with the Russian situation.

Second, another meeting to stem from this among officers of the three Allies, America, Britain and Russia.

This second meeting would prepare the military men of all three countries for the final grand discussions to be held in the three-power conference itself.

The necessity for such gatherings—and they will represent the most awesome marshaling of military power ever seen—has been created by two great military developments which in scope and pace have far outrun the expectations of military conservatives.

First was the Russians' drive to the Dnieper, and the present possibility that they may sweep on beyond. Second was the Allies' rapid progress in Italy, already offering a threat to the Balkans.

Reds Smash Through to Pronya River

far to the east, the Russians were said to have attacked with more than 15 infantry divisions, 6 tank brigades and a large number of artillery formations along a 70-mile front.

Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, German radio commentator, recorded by the Associated Press, called it "a major defensive success" but admitted that "despite heavy losses suffered by the enemy there seems little doubt that the Soviets will continue their attacks."

The weather in the south remains dry longer than in the north, where the Germans said the fall rains already have mired many of the roads.

Nazi broadcasts also admitted some Russian advance columns had driven across the mighty Dnieper, but said they had been hemmed in and that all Russian attempts to reinforce them by bringing up major forces from the east were frustrated.

The Russian failure to claim any crossings indicated they were still tentative and had not seriously breached the Dnieper River defense line.

Through the German broadcasts ran a new tone of confidence, indicating that their hope of holding the river and stalling the Russian summer offensive, now nearing the end of its third month, had brightened.

Neither side mentioned the Kiev battle, where both sides appeared to be dug in on opposite banks of the Dnieper, hurling shells and bombs at each other from range of a few hundred yards. Moscow dispatches mentioned only that the Red army held firmly to its newly won stations in the eastern suburbs of the Ukraine capital and continued to rake the high western cliffs with fire.

210 Points Needed To Slaughter Stray Pig, Pair Told

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 1 (AP).—Rationing regulations destroyed today a gastronomical windfall for Mr. and Mrs. Evan J. Jones, to whose home yesterday wandered a stray 50-pound pig.

In order to consume the porker, the Office of Price Administration ruled today, the Jones must:

Obtain permission from the War Food Administration to have the pig slaughtered by an authorized slaughterhouse and present to the slaughterer an appropriate amount of red ration coupons.

Mrs. Jones, estimating the latter would take 210 points, said she was undecided about the pig's future.

Allies Stepped In

Italo-German Clash Sped Corsica's Fall

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Oct. 1.—The invasion of Corsica by French and American fores was precipitated by a clash between Italians and Germans there, Capt. Lindsey Watson of the French army said on his return here from the island.

When Italy capitulated, he said, there were 80,000 Italians and 10,000 Germans on the island. A violent fight took place between them on the night of September 9 and Corsican patriots joined the Italians.

"The French command in Algiers realized that if the patriots were left to themselves without the help of the French army, the Germans would have repressed them bloodily," said Watson, whose father was Scottish. "This might have injured the cause of resistance all over Europe.

"On September 3 a submarine landed the first company of a shock battalion and on September 13 two fast destroyers landed the rest of them. On the night of September 13 General Mollard, who had been named military governor of Corsica, arrived with Colonel de Leuze.

"On September 17 American Rangers arrived, and then on September 19 two cruisers and several torpedo-boats joined the operation, and then important materel was landed. Four thousand troops were landed on September 23."

Patriots fought the Germans along this lifeline and on September 20 alone killed 1000 Germans and captured 250,

5400 Tons of U. S. Bombs Dropped on Enemy Last Month

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 1.—United States heavy bombers dropped 5400 tons of bombs on enemy targets during September, an increase of more than 50 per cent over the previous high month, the U. S. Eighth Air Force announced tonight.

While Flying Fortresses and Liberators were pouring down this record load their gunners shot down 262 enemy aircraft, probably destroyed 43 more and damaged 115, the announcement said.

The loss of 85 "heavies" by the United States force was described as "well under 4 per cent" of the number of planes participating in the raids. During August, 114 American heavy bombers were lost.

In addition to the many Nazi planes destroyed, the big bombers undoubtedly destroyed many more in repeated raids on enemy airfields, but air force officers made no definite claims on these. Although the number of enemy planes shot down was considerably below the all-time record of 631 destroyed in August, this was probably largely due to the Nazis' reluctance to tackle the big bombers after the terrific beating of the previous month, while increasingly effective and further ranging fighter cover also kept the enemy fighter planes away.

Further reviewing September operations the announcement said:

Fighter Command—Thunderbolts destroyed 39 enemy fighters against a loss of seven.

WHY ON EARTH DO THEY DO IT?

. . . take it for granted that their insurance is just right

It's easy to be sort of lax about insurance, particularly if you've never had a loss. "Guessing" that it's all in order can be awfully costly guesswork. You may have too much, or you may have too little. It's bad business either way.

Moral: Don't risk leaving it to disaster to show where you stand . . Let us go over your insurance situation BEFORE a loss comes.

Senate Working On New Draft Bill

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Senate leaders last night started building an Administration substitute for the Wheeler no-father-draft bill around the Bailey-Clark amendment, already modified to meet high command objections and subject to further revision on the Senate floor.

In a conference with Senator Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat) of North Carolina, it was virtually decided to proceed with the modified Bailey-Clark measure restricting Government deferments of nonfathers as a means of killing Wheeler's flat prohibition on induction of fathers.

The more far-reaching Taft substitute tightening deferments and inducting fathers by age-groups, meanwhile was submitted to Army and Navy leaders for a report. Some portions of the Taft measure may later be accepted by the leadership and incorporated in the Bailey-Clark amendment if they meet military approval, it was indicated.

No Early Showdown

No definite Senate showdown is in prospect before Thursday or Friday of next week, although father inductions already have begun. Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana, yesterday concluded debate for this week in a speech practically conceding the defeat of his own measure. He said he would "let history decide" whether he was right in opposing the fathers' draft.

Following conferences with Army officials and a letter from Gen. George C. Marshall, Senator Bailey announced that the second section of his own bill would be dropped. The section forbade assignment of childless commissioned officers under 38 to Washington or Arlington duty for more than 30 days unless certified as "indispensable" by the Secretaries of War or Navy.

Marshall advised Bailey the Army is complying with the spirit of his amendment, and already has rigidly restricted assignment of younger men to Washington. "I am willing to trust the judgment of General Marshall," Bailey told newsmen.

Unchanged as yet was the heart of the Bailey-Clark amendment designed to steer out of the Government and into the armed forces able-bodied nonfathers between 18 and 38. Only physically fit childless men who were certified by department heads as "indispensable" would be permitted to remain There has been some leadership objection to the word "indispensable," on the grounds that no man is absolutely indispensable.

There is nothing in the Bailey-Clark amendment at its present stage of revision reaching alleged excessive deferments in industry, one of the hottest sources of congressional controversy. Bailey told reporters he favors going into the whole subject of improper utilization of industrial manpower following disposition of the Wheeler bill, and thought decisions on industrial deferments of nonfathers should await that study.

An effort to hold up the fathers' draft decision until a five-man Senate committee can investigate the entire manpower situation, industrial as well as military, meanwhile was launched by Senator C. Wayland Brooks (Republican) of Illinois.

Split Develops

Brooks, aided by Senate Minority Leader McNary, sought to have his resolution referred to the Interstate Commerce Committee headed by Wheeler. Senator Edwin C. Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado, in the chair instead, referred it to the Military Committee, having jurisdiction over manpower and predominantly opposed to the Wheeler Bill.

A split meanwhile developed in the bipartisan group which had pooled their ideas in the Taft substitute, and two of the group introduced a new bill. The new measure, sponsored by Senators Revercomb of West Virginia and Robertson of Wyoming (Republicans), prohibits any occupational deferments of fathers under 30.

Senators Robert A. Taft (Republican) of Ohio and Bennett Clark (Democrat) of Missouri opposed the flat ban on occupational deferments and supported the comprehensive substitute introduced by Taft Friday.

Instead of an arbitrary prohibition, the Taft substitute, provides that deferment of childless men under 30 would have to be approved not only by the board at which the worker registered, but by the board in the community where he works, and by the director of Selective Service as well.

Senator Burnet R. Maybank (Democrat) of South Carolina, later submitted to the Senate statistics compiled by Selective Service from local board figures showing 115,397 male Government employes held occupational deferments on September 15.

This figure had risen from 112,000 in a month, but Maybank said the rise was due to screening of fathers into draft categories in recent weeks. Actually, Maybank said, nonfathers were being sifted out of the Government service all the time. The South Carolina Senator said at least three-fifths of the 115,387 deferred were doing essential work for the War and Navy Departments.

the Dahlias are marching through the garden

Carrying the banner of the changing seasons, the dahlias march softly through the garden. Their brilliant colors flare in bold defiance of the coming frost. This is the garden's most dramatic moment—the quick transition from summer loveliness to winter sleep. For us, too, it is a moment of change . . . in habits and hobbies, in clothes and complexions. It is a time for tuning up our wardrobes and toning up our faces. Dahlia time means Mary Dunhill time to thousands of thoughtful women. For Mary Dunhill's creams and lotions have long been famous for helping to adapt summer skins to winter weather.

Capital Transit Net Decreases 26.7% in Month

By S. Oliver Goodman

The Capital Transit Co. earned 26.7 per cent less in August than in the same 1942 month, despite continued record passenger traffic.

Net income for that month was reported yesterday at $126,921 as compared with $173,262 in August, 1942. Revenue passengers totaled 33,705,935 in August, against 30,761,717 in the corresponding month last year.

Three factors accounted for the decreased net income. First was an increase of $88,251 in operating expenses. Second was a $58,500 upsurge in taxes and third was a $28,985 heavier provision for depreciation. Altogether, these deductions from operating revenues were 9.1 per cent greater than in the same month last year. Operating revenues of $2,264,683 were 5.9 per cent improved.

For the first eight months the Capital Transit lines carried a record 280,483,513 passenger total and received $18,854,358 in operating revenues. This compared with 218,909,530 passengers and $15,141,979 in operating revenues in the corresponding period last year. The gain was 28.1 per cent in passengers and 24.5 per cent revenues.

On the other hand, operating expenses, were 19.5 per cent heavier, taxes were 62.1 per cent greater and depreciation charges were 25.4 per cent increased. This resulted in a net income of $1,088,831 for the first eight months, or 7.3 per cent less than the $1,175,153 in the like 1942 period.

New Record in Clearings

An all-time record in Washington bank clearings was recorded last month when $195,600,676 in checks were handled by local institutions. This was an increase of $48,186,009 over clearings for September, 1942, and compared with $179,811,746 in April of this year, the previous record amount.

The increase was attributed mainly to the Third War Loan drive in which Washingtonians raised 79 million in September of their 94 million quota. Federal income tax payments during the month were another new factor.

For the first nine months Washington clearings aggregated $1,464,515,804, also a new record for that period. Check transactions in the same period last year were $1,379,538,613.

7 Per Cent Gain in Store Sales

Washington department store sales in the week ended September 25 showed a 7 per cent increase over the corresponding 1942 period, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. A similar gain was shown for the entire Fifth Reserve District.

Both Washington and Fifth District sales for the four-week period ended September 25 were 10 per cent improved over the like 1942 period.

$6,920,000 Local Offering

An offering of $6,920,000 in National Capital Housing Authority bonds will be made next Thursday, it was announced yesterday. Eight other local agencies will make similar offerings for competitive bids. Among them are:

Newport News, Va., $1,759,000; Portsmouth, Va., $1,805,000; Richmond, Va., $1,435,000.

District Manager Named

The Research Institute of America, Inc., of New York City has announced the appointment of Peyton H. Enniss as district manager of the Institute for the District of Columbia and sections of Maryland and Virginia. The Washington offices are located at 1026 17 st. n.w.

Carl Hovgard is the institute's president, Leo Cherne its executive secretary, and Leon Henderson, former OPA chief, is chairman of the board of editors. Its editorial staff includes some 70 economists, lawyers, accountants and educators.

Prefabrication Discounted

Prefabricated or other mass-produced homes will not be a cure-all for America's housing problem after the war, Gardner W. Taylor of the United States Savings & Loan League, said yesterday.

Taylor presided at Chicago sessions of the league's postwar savings and loan program committee, which is studying after-victory home financing.

He said the committee is concerned over the prospect of potential home-owners with savings in cash and war bonds, "susceptible to all kinds of speculative and spending allurements."

Taylor said the league expects many improvements in housing, but the committee is convinced that either wittingly or unwittingly a great many people who are contemplating home ownership after the war have been led to believe that fabulous developments in planning and in the new use of materials will reduce building costs to record levels," he said.

Crude Oil Supplies Decrease in Week

By the Associated Press

The Bureau of Mines reported yesterday that stocks of domestic and foreign crude petroleum totaled 233,013,000 barrels on September 25, a net increase of 682,000 barrels for the week. Domestic crude increased 48,000 barrels; foreign crude decreased 330,000 barrels.

Daily average production was 4,344,000 barrels, a decrease of 22,000. Runs to stills averaged 4,186,000 barrels daily, compared with 4,103,000.

WLB Approves Incentive Pay Experiment

quests to approve incentive wage schemes.

He pointed out that the traditional type of incentive pay plan relates to the individual worker's performance to a normal performance for his specific job, instead of on a plant-wide basis, but explained that the wartime need for speed usually did not permit time for introduction of this type of plan.

"The plant-wide plan looks like a natural in these times," Taylor said, "but it has great dangers."

Changes in design or in production methods could upset an incentive plan, causing difficulties which could interfere with production, he said. Plans must be carefully prepared and a willingness to change standards when production conditions change must be shown, he said.

Charl J. Shipley, labor member representing the CIO, said that the labor members went along with the Grumman plan because no union had representation in the plant. He said in CIO cases, he would insist on labor receiving the full production increase resulting from an incentive plan—a 1 per cent pay increase for each 1 per cent increase in production.

He stated that labor would be on guard to make sure that plant-wide incentive plans are not used as wedges to reintroduce individual type incentive plans opposed by labor.

In a formal opinion, Taylor explained that "the board cannot approve applications for incentive wage payments which represent hidden wage rate increases or wage rate decreases contrary to the stabilization program."

"It will approve carefully developed plans designed to increase the production of existing facilities and available manpower where wage increases bear a proper and reasonable relationship to the increased output achieved as a result of the increased effort of employes," Taylor said.

Shipley pointed to labor's traditional opposition to incentive wages in a formal opinion, but stated "Since it is possible that production may be improved in some plants by the introduction of proper established incentive systems, thereby contributing to the winning of the war, we have concurred in the decision in this case. But this decision must be considered only as a tentative step . . . not as a general guide for new incentive systems."

U. S.-Born Japanese See Action in Italy

By Relman Morin
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the Fifth Army in Italy, Sept. 25 (Delayed).—The first unit of American-born Japanese troops to enter the overseas combat zone went into action in the mountains above the Gulf of Salerno today—and every one of them was smiling with satisfaction.

Their smiles brought expressions of blank amazement from veterans and officers accustomed to seeing men enter combat with tense, drawn faces. These troops acted like they were going to a baseball game, which, incidentally, is their favorite pastime.

The unit was recruited from Hawaii and most of its officers are Regular Army men who served there. They have taken for their motto "Remember Pearl Harbor." And their smiles of anticipation were not forced today.

Eager for Action

"They're really anxious to get into action," their commander said. "I've been with them since this outfit was organized and I wouldn't trade my command for any other in the Army.

"They feel they've got a chance to prove they're real Americans and demonstrate their loyalty.

"The average stature of the whole unit is only 5 feet 4, but the officers have said they can outmarch and outwork most ordinary troops. They are experts at taking cover and advancing without disclosing their positions.

"They laugh and joke incessantly, exchanging remarks in that patois peculiar to Hawaii. Very few of them speak to people. They've got something extra to fight for."

Actually, he said, the men would rather be in the Pacific fighting the Japanese than the Germans, "but we're saving that for later."

Officers Enthusiastic

The officers are unanimously enthusiastic about the quality and spirit of the men. They said they never had seen any troops train harder and more assiduously and never had any doubt as to what to expect from them in combat.

They were ashore in Italy only one day and had just finished organizing their encampment when a German prisoner was brought past the site. He gaped with surprise when he saw their faces and asked if they were Japanese. An interpreter explained that they were Americans of Japanese parentage.

The German shook his head in wonder and said:

"Ach, that's American."

Purge Continues

OPA Accepts Resignation Of O'Leary

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

The resignation of Paul M. O'Leary as Deputy OPA Administrator in charge of rationing was announced yesterday as part of several more personnel changes effected by General Manager Chester Bliss Bowles to popularize and strengthen the price agency.

O'Leary, who has been classed as one of the "professors" for whom Congress has had no sympathy, will return to the faculty of Cornell University. His successor is to be announced shortly, Bowles said.

Back to Cornell

O'Leary, the last top man carried over from the days of Leon Henderson, said in a statement issued in Ithaca, N. Y., and carried by the Associated Press, simultaneously with Bowles' announcement that: "I have wanted for some time to return to Cornell where from now on I believe I can be more useful than in OPA."

He added, "Mr. Bowles has told me that he is now willing and able to replace me with a person of his own selection."

OPA officials pointed out Bowles now is apparently reorganizing his rationing division after having completed similar work in the price division. The only other top man in the rationing division is Harold B. Rowe, director of food rationing.

Rowe, however, has been given a six months' leave of absence to work with the Office of Economic Warfare. He is not expected to return to OPA which he joined at its inception after working with Brookings Institution and previously serving as an extension economist at Massachusetts State College.

Slocum Appointed

Bowles also announced appointment of Clarence W. Slocum of Fanwood, N. J., as head of the industrial manufacturing price division. Slocum was president of Beckwith-Chandler Co., producers of paints and varnishes.

Another OPA personnel change was disclosure by Senator Brewster (Republican) of Maine that Raymond A. Messerve of Portland, Me., a grocery official, had been appointed chief of distribution in OPA's price section.

Clair Wilcox, who has headed OPA's industrial materials division which will now be combined under Slocum's direction, is returning to his teaching post at Swarthmore College, Pa., it also was disclosed.

duce his payment of the victory tax next March 15, or could leave it deposited with the Government until after the war.

The committee's decision yesterday would make all individuals eligible for the credit, whatever their bond or insurance or other payments and require them to apply the credit next March 15 to their tax bill at that time.

The change was in line with the present pay-as-you-earn tax law, which takes in through withholding from wage and salary earners, only 3 per cent out of the 5 per cent victory levy, on the assumption that the remaining 2 per cent would be claimed as a current rather than postwar credit next March.

At the same time, the move was interpreted as a necessary first step toward absorbing the victory tax into the income tax structure, as favored by a number of Congressmen.

consumers between 20 and 30 million dollars.

In the midst of its "winter-pricing program" for fresh vegetables, the OPA thus finds itself not only without policy authority but also shorn of certainty it can make any of its regulations stick.

President Roosevelt reaffirmed at his press conference yesterday his former statement that he is planning a message on the "food situation" to send to Congress. He is expected to outline the Administration's plans for "really rolling back the cost of living."

NHA Counsel Reclassified 1-A; District Dads Safe for Month

The District Selective Service Appeals Board yesterday ordered Leon Keyserling, general counsel to the National Housing Agency, classified in 1-A, a day after a spokesman for the Housing Agency said that Keyserling had asked for cancellation of his deferment request.

Also yesterday all Selective Service Boards in the Washington area—District of Columbia Alexandria, Montgomery, Prince Georges, Arlington and Fairfax counties—revealed they would be able to meet their October calls without resorting to the drafting of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers.

However, a warning was issued to the effect that the fathers would be needed to make up at least two-thirds of the November call.

In the meantime the work of reclassifying the fathers, getting physical examinations and studies of occupational deferments will go ahead during the current month.

Keyserling was classified in 2-A on May 21 of this year for a six months period, at the request of the NHA and with the sanction of the War Manpower Commission.

William E. Leahy, District director of Selective Service, appealed this classification to the Appeals Board, which yesterday ordered Keyserling placed in 1-A.

Keyserling, in a letter dated September 27, to John B. Blandford, jr., administrator of the NHA, and in which he asked that the request for deferment be canceled, stated that he had not received any notice that an appeal of his case had been taken.

Blandford, in reply, insisted that his agency had taken no appeal as the local board had granted the requested deferment and therefore the agency had nothing to appeal. He expressed regret at the prospect of losing Keyserling, and praised highly the work the attorney had done, especially since his deferment.

Blandford also said that out of 19,000 employes, the agency had requested deferment for only 13.

Roosevelt Indorses Freedom of Air for Planes

airlines and airlines belonging to couhtries with lower standards of living, the President pointed out that that problem was solved in the case of merchant shipping with a mail subsidy, thus hinting that a similar device might be used to put the airlines on a par with their competitors.

Otherwise, we might have to raise the standards of living in other countries, the President quipped, adding that it might be a more difficult job to perform.

The President said that he believed our airlines should be run by private concerns where it can be done profitably. He said he thought there would be a few runs where it would be to the interest of the Government to maintain airlines where it would not pay private enterprise to operate them.

Asked if he advocated free use of all airports now being built throughout the world, the President replied that he did. He indicated, however, that there would not be an effort to exercise American sovereignty over bases established in foreign areas by asking how Americans would like it if another nation told us it wants sovereignty over airports it is using in American territory.

S. J. Solomon, chairman of the Airlines Committee on United States Air Policy comprising sixteen domestic airlines, expressed the opinion that the President was supporting a postwar aviation program which the industry filed recently with the Civil Aeronautics Board.

"I am confident," Solomon said, "that the whole American aviation industry will applaud the President's determination that he does not want to put the Government in commercial, passenger and freight service after the war. . . . All that the domestic airlines seek is the right to compete for world air markets after the war, and at the same time to expand the benefits of air transport to virtually every community in the United States."

Victory Gardens

The uninitiated Washingtonian who has only just caught his breath after fighting his way through a summer of back-breaking heat and unprecedented dry weather will imagine, perhaps, that the September harvest shows held by our Victory gardeners in the District and its environs have more closely resembled a wake than a Thanksgiving festival. But this year's fine exhibits of vegetables and fruits, both fresh and canned, offer tangible proof that the hazards of the worst drought since 1900 were successfully circumvented by the ingenuity and industry of the gardeners. No small credit is also due to the Victory Garden Committee who made available to the owners of 25 thousand registered gardens, to say nothing of the tenants of 75 community lots, valuable professional horticultural advice in the form of weekly memoranda.

These bulletins written, for the most part, for the benefit of the large army of ardent but uninformed novices, followed the seasons and pointed the way to effective measures to combat our alert enemies, the insects, the worms, and hosts of vegetable plagues and diseases. Instructions for planting and thinning and the buying of seeds suitable to our climate were also included. Through the efforts of a network of faithful volunteer regional chairmen, plowmen were provided when plowmen were scarce and when the formidable character of the drought became apparent they performed the miracle of bringing "rain" (through the use of fire hydrants) to the parched earth. The committee's services are open to everyone and will continue throughout the winter in the form of lectures on soil preparation and intelligent suggestions for early spring planting and planning so that the lessons of the "toughest summer in 43 years" will not be lost and seeds will not be wasted.

Any review of this summer's Victory garden campaign reveals the fact that the gardeners have received fat dividends from their invested time and energy. For, beyond the obvious patriotic satisfaction of having alleviated the food shortage, they have not only subsisted on the fruits of their labor throughout the summer, and wisely canned their surplus for the lean months ahead, but have substantially added to their health, vigor and happiness by climbing out of their rocking chairs and exercising once-flabby muscles in the sun and fresh air. But, perhaps, the most important asset of all has been a rediscovered community spirit which has been lighted by communal labors. This, it has been noted, began in some cases at home. Men have rediscovered their wives and children, neighbors have found one another, and there is even the story of a man who was taken ill in the middle of the summer and whose friends worked his garden so tenderly that he won first prize at the harvest show.

Nearer Equalization

The long-promised equalization of gasoline rations in the region east of the Rocky Mountains has come nearer; but it is not yet here. To be sure, B and C rations throughout the area are now uniform but holders of A cards in the Midwest and Southwest continue to be favored. They will receive 3 gallons of gas weekly compared to the 2-gallon allowance of the Eastern States. Although the OPA explains that the extra Western gallon must in future be used for occupational driving before the motorist will be entitled to supplementary rations, this new restriction certainly does not put the Midwestern A-card holders on the same basis as Eastern holders of similar cards. It merely subjects them to a slightly vexatious new ruling that in practice is likely to have little effect on driving habits.

According to report, the transportation difficulties that prevented a desired upbuilding of gasoline stocks in the Eastern area in the past have been overcome. Even though the accelerated movement of fuel oil into the East has hampered efforts to increase gasoline storage stocks, which are now at 43 per cent of normal, there has been a steady improvement in the supply situation, although perhaps not sufficient to warrant fulfillment of the promise to equalize. Perhaps OPA will summon up courage to take the last step when the Midwestern motorists have recovered from the shock of being put more nearly on a basis of equality with the East.

The cuts in B and C rations are an acknowledgment that B and C cards have been acquired by large numbers of persons not entitled to them. The method adopted to squeeze the water out of these supplemental rations—as the OPA puts it—is a crude device for correcting abuses of privilege that will work hardship on many who have valid occupational reasons for claiming larger allowances. However, the "squeeze" method provides a simple and quick way of cracking down on the people who abuse their privileges, while affording relief to those who can prove their need of additional gasoline.

Our Foreign Policy

The United States is displaying a dangerous lethargy toward the winning of the peace. From London come reports to the effect that our Allies are increasingly uneasy over the uncertainty of our postwar policy and the hesitation of Washington to enunciate any positive and clear-cut ideas as to how the peace should be preserved after it has been won. From the grass roots of our own country come ever stronger demands that we abolish the stupid policy of employing our enormous influence and power in world affairs only in times of war. Yet it is evident that we do not now have a foreign policy that satisfies either demand. What is worse, we lack even the machinery through which such a policy can be devised and made effective over a long period of years.

This weakness in our international position ought to be giving us concern above every other issue, except that of winning the war. It brings us face to face with the frightening possibility that all the blood which is being spilled may once more purchase only an armistice while the world catches its breath for another orgy of slaughter. In no circumstances can we evade it. For failure to organize the strength of the United Nations for preservation of world peace would inevitably force each nation to seek whatever security it could find by building up its own defenses and its ability to make war. And in that struggle would lie the seeds of a new conflict.

But there is not much point in emphasizing the danger that lies in following this course of least resistance. Citizens at their work benches, on their farms, or in their offices are now well aware of the cost of unpreparedness for peace as well as the cost of unpreparedness for war. Even school boys know it. The question on their lips today is: What is our Government going to do about it? And to that query no one can give the answer.

So far are we from being able to answer this question of the utmost importance to our future that the Senate has even hesitated to debate it. Until a few days ago Senator Connally, chairman of the Foreign Relations Subcommittee studying the problem of postwar international relationships, was unwilling to face "ill-considered" discussion of the subject on the Senate floor. And Secretary Hull has offered us nothing more than the bare skeleton of the Atlantic Charter and the chaff of general principles that the dictators flattened beneath their tanks. Today Americans are spending their lives and resources to reassert those principles of freedom and democracy. That great struggle may soon reach the beginning of the end. But we have made no comparable progress toward mobilizing our influence for world peace.

It is time to settle down to realistic grappling with the forces that will be at work in the postwar world. Of course, there will not be full agreement between ourselves and our allies. Numerous differences will have to be ironed out in the give and take of friendly negotiations. Our greatest difficulty at the moment is that of even entering upon such negotiations without a well formulated American policy to which a great majority of the people in both major parties adhere. Our Russian ally knows precisely what she wants out of the peace. Great Britain, too, has the advantage of a general foreign policy that she has maintained for more than a century. The only chance that these policies can be merged into a United Nations system of collective security is for the United States to take the leadership in sponsoring such a system.

And if our Government does decide to sponsor such a system, our allies will be forced to ask: What assurance is there that your adherence to collective security will outlast the present Administration? The only assurance we can give them will come from lifting our foreign policy entirely out of politics—by achieving a truly national attitude toward our international neighbors far and near. It is toward this goal that we must direct our most sincere and intelligent efforts if we are to meet the peace with the same statesmanship that is being brought to bear upon the war.

We fully realize that the achievement of such a policy in the crucial months ahead would be something of a miracle. But miracles have been worked before in America—notably when our Constitution merged 13 straggling States into a Nation. The revolution through which the world is now passing can produce results of equal moment if we have the leadership and the organization to implement the will of the people.

The President must necessarily be the spearhead of this leadership, but it must also be so broadly based as to eliminate all considerations of partisanship and factionalism. Possibly the best approach would be a council on postwar foreign policy composed of representatives of both parties in the Senate and House, of top-flight officials of the State Department and a few trusted nonofficial statesmen in the field of foreign affairs. But the form is a lesser issue. What is most important is mobilization of the profound national sentiment now evident in this country for a positive collective security system that will bridge the chasm of partisanship into which Wilson's hopeful plans fell a generation ago. President Roosevelt may well find in this immense task the greatest challenge to leadership in his long career.

Fog Of War

After a tour of the Pacific war fronts, Senator Lodge has seen fit to protest against the pap and sugared gruel that is being fed to the American public in the guise of war news. The Senator understands that a certain doctoring of the news may be necessary for the sake of deceiving the enemy, but he also thinks that a time comes when it is even more necessary that "the truth be told to the home folks for the sake of the men who give their lives." He has quite a point when he speaks about the irony of feeding back, via shortwave broadcasts, distortions of the news to the very men who, as the phrase goes, are in the best position to know what the score actually is.

One recalls, for example, some of the accounts by the survivors of Bataan about the bitterness with which the half-starved, fever-ridden men who fought that hopeless battle heard some of the flamboyant, boastful broadcasts sent out from America. Evidently the same bitterness is still prevalent among soldiers throughout the Pacific sectors. "Where they are hit the hardest," said Senator Lodge, "and their outfits have had the heaviest casualties, the news seems the worst misrepresented. When suffering intensely they will hear a bland radio announcement saying, 'The enemy is routed; our losses are negligible. There is little if any resistance'."

To Senator Lodge's complaint has now been added the statement of the OWI's Newspaper Advisory Committee to the effect that "the American people are not being adequately informed about the war." Their daily diet of news tends to be distorted and misleading because of the paucity of information given in official communiques and dispatches passed by military censors obeying official directives. Of course it is sometimes possible for a battle or campaign to go very badly from the standpoint of individual soldiers or individual units engaged in it and yet proceed quite satisfactorily from the standpoint of G. H. Q., or the General Staff or a war council. But the public ought to have more facts—facts of the kind that Lieut. Comdr. Frank Grismer gave us about the Battle of Salerno—as well as the General Staff's view as to how the battle is going.

Much confusion arises from conflicting "expert" interpretations of the news largely because the public has so few facts from which to draw its own conclusions. We are told one evening that it now boils down to a question of whether we or the Russians will get to Berlin first. On the next we are told, perhaps by the same experts, how much power the Germans still have and how German morale appears virtually indestructible. Here is ample cause for bewilderment and for deterioration of our own morale. "If there is any complacency or letdown in the war effort on the part of the American people," as the Newspaper Advisory Committee points out, "it is not due to any lack of patriotism or desire for easy victory, but rather to the absence of full necessary understanding."

Ambassador To Moscow

Since the United States and Russia resumed diplomatic relations, 10 years ago, very few posts in our foreign service have been of greater importance than the Moscow ambassadorship. And never has that been more true than now. For as the war approaches its great climax in Europe and, in consequence, plans for the peace have to be formulated, the need of a working arrangement with Russia becomes increasingly more imperative.

For that reason the President is to be congratulated in his choice of W. Averell Harriman as our new Ambassador to Russia, succeeding the able and devoted Admiral William H. Standley, who resigned recently. Mr. Harriman's interest in Russia goes back to the early years of the Soviet regime. He has had occasion during the past two years to do business with the Russians; he likes them and is liked by them. What is more important, he has a clear-eyed awareness of the realities in Russian-American relations, which, while good, have not been unclouded in the past. As Ambassador to Russia he will be a valuable colleague of Secretary Hull's at the forthcoming Anglo-Russian-American conference.

RENOVATION

Drink deep, drink deep this wintry afternoon
Thy quietude; waive all beneath the moon,
All hope and aim surrendered; strain and mire
Be lost in benediction of the fire.
Let the loud world that hustled in the brain
Fade off, remoter than unnoted rain
That gurgles down hid gutters; let it flow
Away, away. There's deeper bliss to know
When, ebbing like corporeal strength and bloom,
Light softly leaves the whispering living room,
And all the air is full of easeful sighs,
And mirrors darken, as if something dies.
So shall the spirit, as if drawn from thee
High over body and world outworn, be free
Companion of the fresh angelic singing
Which missel-thrushes on the gloom are flinging,
And, blest as they, shall feel its wintry pain
Lost in the white immaculate homes of rain;
And, young as they, upon the topmost bough
Of Life's unwithering tree, so withered now
To mortal vision, see its hoary scars
Break into blossom, as the night with stars.

Good Neighbors

Pan-American Highway

AMONG THE many New World cooperative projects that the Second World War has spurred, none is more important than the Pan-American Highway. Work on it is being rushed as part of hemisphere defense. In Central American countries this work has also served to take up employment slacks caused by ship shortage. But the highway, like any number of developments speeded up by war, will really come into its own when hostilities end and we start the shift to peace.

A line of communication connecting the New World republics by land is one of the oldest Pan-American ideas. It was suggested at the first Pan-American conference in 1889 that a connecting system of railways should be built to stimulate trade and friendship in the hemisphere. The fifth conference at Santiago de Chile in 1923 proposed cooperative action on a highway. First studies were begun that year.

In the early 1930's work on several sections got under way. The link best known to us, the 760-mile stretch between Laredo, Tex., and Mexico City, was completed in 1936.

Land Communication

The importance of land communications among the American republics has been stressed at every conference since 1923. In the middle 1930's the United States began to lend the small Central American countries modest sums to help along with the work. In late 1941, when war conditions made a land connection vital, the Congress appropriated 20 million dollars to rush the link with the Panama Canal Zone. Central American countries borrowed 10 million to put up for the work.

At the time of Pearl Harbor half of the South American part of the system could be traveled in all weather. Eighty per cent had dry-weather surface. Work was slowly going forward on one of the two gaps in the route in southern Ecuador. Since obtaining Export-Import credits, Ecuador has increased the pace of construction.

Southward to the Panama Canal, three-fifths of the highway was ready for all-weather use. There were unfinished stretches in Mexico, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Honduras and Panama. Mexico had obtained export-import credits to rush work on her section.

As a defense measure, the United States after Pearl Harbor made arrangements for our Army to build a pioneer road along the route of the highway to span gaps in Central America. It was at first intended to complete them this year. Overseas offensives have slowed shipment of road machinery, however, and at present the work is scheduled to be finished in 1944.

Building the 300-mile link between the canal and the South American road has been put off till after the war.

Spur of the Road

In South America a spur of the road begins at La Guaira, seaport of Venezuela's capital, and runs to Bogota, Colombia's capital. From there it runs to the capital of Ecuador and, lacking one 200-mile link, on to Peru. From Lima there are two routes southward to Buenos Aires. One goes down to Chile's capital and across the Andes. It is closed by snow about six months of the year. The other runs diagonally across by way of Bolivia's capital.

From Montevideo, across the Plata from Buenos Aires, the road goes north to Rio de Janeiro.

When this great continental system is completed, it will give the New World first of all a line of land communication in case we are caught short again by a war. It is the New World's Burma Road. As important as this, it will permit a tourist and commercial exchange that will tie all the countries closer together as nothing else can. It will help them hold among themselves the new trade that war has started. In addition, it will start internal development in backward regions of each country.

No better proof of this can be offered than the development in northern Mexico that followed quickly after completion of the road there.

Villagers and farmers living 20 to 40 miles back in the hinterland began to trace crude trails to the main highway. These became feeder roads as more and more people used them. A tourist industry sprang up in principal towns along the highway. Tourist demands began to raise sanitation standards. New sources of income made it possible for people living in the region to buy made goods, both imports from the United States and products manufactured in Mexico, that they had never been able to afford before.

This is the pattern for increased economic activity within countries where the highway runs and for increased commercial interchange among neighbors. Nothing could be more desirable for the prosperity and strength of the hemisphere.

1918 And 1943

By Barnet Nover

Differences And Similarities

THE WAR PICTURE in Europe today contains so many striking similarities with that of 1918 that we tend to forget some very real differences. These differences are important.

In the last war, as now, the fourth year of fighting saw the turning of the tide. What we must not fail to notice is that the ebb in Germany's fortunes has this time been much less rapid and decisive than it was a quarter of a century ago.

Five times in the period between March and July, 1918, Ludendorff hurled the German army against the Allied lines on the Western Front. The advantages, at first, seemed to be all on the German side. The possibility of a decisive German victory was very real.

THE FRENCH had been bled white; the British were drawing on their last reserves of manpower; and up until the spring of 1918 the flow of American troops into France had been little more than a mere trickle. On the other hand the Brest Litovsk peace had made it possible for Ludendorff to move 19 German and Austrian divisions from the east to the west.

But while the Allied lines bent under Ludendorff's hammer blows they did not break. On July 18 the final German offensive was smashed, on August 8 came the Allied victory in the Battle of Amiens—"the black day of the German army" Ludendorff called it—and three months later Germany had surrendered.

THIS TIME THE PEAK of Germany's offensive power was reached in the summer and early fall of 1942. One great German army reached the Volga at Stalingrad. Another was pressing down the northern Caucasus to Grozny. A German-Italian army, under Marshal Rommel, had swept across Egypt to a point only 60 miles from Alexandria.

Had the Germans been able to break through at that time, reach the Persian Gulf and thus effect a junction with the Japanese the war would have been indefinitely prolonged. Fortunately, the Russians held at Stalingrad, the British at El Alamein and Hitler's dream of world domination went up in smoke.

BEGINNING with Rommel's defeat at El Alamein in October, 1942, the Germans have suffered an almost unbroken series of reverses. They have been driven out of Egypt, Libya and Tunisia, out of Sicily and Southern Italy, out of the Caucasus, the Don Valley, the Donets and the eastern Ukraine.

Yet despite all that and despite Allied bombing which has reduced Hamburg, Essen, Cologne and other German cities to a shambles (this was an experience the Germans were largely spared during the last war) it would be foolhardy to assume that Germany after a whole year of defeats has now reached the October, 1918, period of this war.

THIS MAY very well be. The possibility of a sudden German collapse must be taken into account. We must not bank on it.

In at least three major particulars the situation today is quite different from what it was in 1918.

The first is that one of the factors which led the German high command to throw in the sponge once defeat became a certainty in 1918 was the desire to prevent the complete smashing of the German army. The military leaders believed that even in defeat enough could be salvaged from the wreckage ultimately to make possible a new bid for world domination.

They can have no such illusions today. Today the German army as an entity which has survived all manner of political changes in Germany stands or falls with the Nazi regime.

THE SECOND great difference between then and now is that the control which Hitler exercises inside Germany is infinitely more thorough, complete and drastic than was the control exercised by the Kaiser's regime.

To contemporaries, the Germany of 1918 appeared to be an unmitigated autocracy. Yet it had a Reichstag that was not altogether a rubber stamp—opposition voices were heard there from time to time—and a press which was not completely under the thumb of the government, as is the case today. The shadow of Hitler—and Himmler—is over all in the Reich.

THIRDLY, whereas in 1918 the Allies were in a position to put continuous and increasing pressure on all of Germany's partners—on Austria by way of Italy, on Bulgaria by way of Greece, on Turkey from Palestine and later, after Bulgaria had surrendered, from that country—this is not yet true today.

Italy has, of course, been knocked out of the war as an active ally of the Reich. But only a small—and the more remote—part of the Italian peninsula can as yet be used by the Allies as a base for an assault on Germany herself.

True, Rumania, Hungary, Bulgaria, are sick of the war. But the German forces are near at hand, the Russian and Anglo-American Armies are still far away.

These German allies may collapse from internal disorders and the pressure of our air power. They cannot surrender until we are in a position to move in.

So, despite the fact that the blows which Germany has received during the past year are in many respects heavier than the blows she received in 1918, the Germans fight on.

It is a losing fight, a fight whose only justification is the hope that the Allies will get so tired that they will be willing to accept a negotiated peace. But while it lasts the fight is certain to be fierce and bloody.

Union Teachers

I noticed in September 21 issue, your editorial, "Ban on Union Teachers." To me you seem to be off the beam. You are distressed over the fact that the Board of Education in Oklahoma City had a clause in the teachers' contracts barring them from membership in a labor union. I, as a former high school teacher, and now a laborer, can see no reason for any objections to such a clause in teachers' contracts. What business has a teacher in the city schools belonging to a labor union in the first place? Teachers don't have a labor union, besides they are working for the State and not a private employer. As employes of the State, they are not allowed to bargain collectively nor strike. So belonging to a labor union wouldn't help them in the least with their work in the schoolroom, but on the other hand might be a hindrance. Teachers are not allowed to teach religion in the schoolrooms, then why have a labor proselyter in the schoolroom preaching unionism?

Firm Friendship

The public sentiment regarding Great Britain which does or may permeate America is today a matter of great, even vital, importance. I, with many others, have always believed that Great Britain, through Foreign Minister Canning, made the Monroe Doctrine a substantial thing instead of a mere empty declaration.

I would not take the liberty of infringing upon your valuable time if I were not firmly convinced that in this matter Great Britain acted in such a way as to show a firm friendship, as international friendships go, for the United States, and that just now all actions of that character should be brought to the notice of our people.

Paper Conservation

In view of the restrictions placed by the War Production Board in its program of standardization and simplification in curtailing the manufacture of certain paper stocks, I feel that Government agencies should also be made to realize the hardships witnessed by the printing and allied graphic arts industries.

While the suggestions listed below refer specifically to the overseas branch of the Office of War Information, they can also apply, in some measure, to other Government agencies.

The suggestions follow:

1. Jobs requiring more than one page of printed matter should be processed on both sides of the sheet. Should the subject matter reflect through the reverse side, because of the transparency of the paper, a heavier stock can be used.

2. Condensation of printed matter can materially save paper. Instead of processing jobs on size 8x10½ stock, an arrangement for two forms can be prepared on the same plate or stencil and the paper cut to size 5¼x8.

3. For the distribution of OWI employe reading matter, observe the following:

a. Accurate count of employes within organization.

b. Proper floor-by-floor distribution through contact and cooperation with secretary of each section and a signature from each recipient of the directive. (This will provide complete coverage without waste.)

4. Standardization of forms will tend to avoid duplication of effort, time and materials.

5. The use of lighter weight paper stock will bring down costs.

6. Excess printed matter and obsolete forms (one side blank) can be sent to cutting department for use as memorandum pads. (Padding costs are negligible.)

The receiving and production desk of the Reproduction Department should suggest to persons bringing in jobs for processing, ways and means to effect economy and productive efficiency.

Bureau heads should meet with chief of reproduction section to review reproduction department facilities and maximum machine potentialities with a view toward the possibility of transferring outside contract work to our reproduction units.

Perhaps the most important factor in the intelligent handling of the above is the employe and his or her attitude toward the job on hand. The present wage disparagements do not attract capable and experienced assistants (the wage levels have not been readjusted since 1923). The pay incentive through increased wages will do wonders in building up morale where it is needed most (in the lower wage bracket classifications).

The Twitchells On The Venice Bombing

"You can get some idea of what a war this has turned out to be from the report they're bombing Venice," sighed Elmer Twitchell. "Venice, the land of love, romance, and moonlight serenaders."

"I always thought that was one place where you could get away from trouble," mused brother Luke.

"I could never associate Venice with hate except when I went to a bar there and ordered an American cocktail," said Elmer.

"Do you think the reports of the bombing are true?" asked Luke.

"I'm afraid so, but the thought of bombs bursting in that atmosphere of hand-holding, necking and gondola cruising is too much for me. I could as easily think of Jack Dempsey taking a poke at Frank Sinatra, or a couple of Notre Dame halfbacks jumping on Dorothy Dix."

"We must have had a good reason for the bombing," insisted Luke. "Maybe we got information that Goering and Ribbentrop were vacationing on the Grand Canal."

"What could there be in Venice to bomb?" demanded Elmer. "I don't suppose Hitler is above trying to operate some of those new rockets from the top of the Campanile. He might even try to sneak a long-range cannon into the pigeon-feeding area of St. Mark's Plaza. It must have been something like that."

"I would hate to think what one bomb would do to the Venetian scenery," said Luke.

"So would I. The old place has been crumbling for centuries and a lot of those hotels and villas were vulnerable to pea-shooters, but it was the ancient atmosphere that endeared it to millions of tourists. Blow in the wall of one room in a Grand Canal hotel and you would shatter the atmosphere of a billion love stories."

"Many a great love story was born there," said Luke, wistfully.

"Venice was a place for artists, debutantes, musicians, poets, authors, dramatists, princes and princesses, brides and bridegrooms, the lighthearted, the carefree and the great lovers of all history," went on Elmer. "All of a sudden — bam! — and it becomes just another city bashed by the war. Even if our side did the bombing I hope we missed."

"How about Naples?" asked Luke.

"That was a lovely, lazy, romantic city, too, but it was in the path of things. Naples, Capri, Amalfi Drive, Sorrento, and Salerno—they are hard to associate with blitzes and hatred, too, but the war swept right over 'em. You can imagine the feelings of a tourist like me."

"Naples," mused Luke. "Gosh, do you remember away back when the only thing they feared there was Vesuvius!"

"Oh man!" said Elmer.

Ely Culbertson has extensive plans for the postwar world. He thinks too many nations have been playing the "dummy" hand.

New York's policewomen have just been equipped with a cowhide bag holding a 38-caliber pistol, a medium red lipstick and a powder puff. We expect any day now to hear some desperado shriek, "She pulled a lipstick on me!"

"Use your gun as you do your lipstick," cautioned Mayor LaGuardia to the policewomen. At first we thought this highly dangerous advice. We thought it might do a lot of damage to a lady's lips. But it seems the mayor added the clause, "use it only when you need it; don't overdo either."

This may be hard for a policewoman to follow. What the mayor probably meant was, "Don't blaze away with your lipstick the minute you get in a tough spot, try pacifying the offender with a little rouge and a kick in the shins first."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

To Certain Idealists

A GOOD REPORTER writes that "Senate proponents of a much wider international alliance were jubilant" this week because the five Senators returning from the theaters of war are critical of a number of things in our relations with the British. "They termed the exclusive Anglo-American alliance," which Mr. Churchill is supposed to have "proposed" as "on the skids."

LIPPMANN

Now the first thing to be said about all this is that Mr. Churchill did not and could not have proposed an exclusive Anglo-American alliance. For Great Britain has a twenty year alliance with Soviet Russia. She has alliances with Turkey, Portugal, Egypt, Irak, and with Persia, which is also allied with Russia. She had an alliance with France which was broken only because the Vichy government broke it. Britain has the substance of a working alliance with the Netherlands empire, with the Belgian Empire, with Norway, with Greece, and the equivalent with several other states. So it is obvious that Mr. Churchill did not, could not, and would not propose an exclusive alliance, or an exclusive working arrangement, or what President Monroe called "a concert by agreement" with the United States exclusively.

THESE BEING the facts, how is it possible that proponents of "a much wider international alliance" should come to think that it was an alternative to, or in conflict with, the continuation in peace of the appropriate working arrangements which we now have with the British nations and with British colonies? For we are now working closely not only with the United Kingdom, but also with Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, India, as well as with British colonies such as Newfoundland, Bermuda, Trinidad, Gibraltar, Malta, and many others.

Yet it is undoubtedly true that there are a considerable number who feel that to recognize that our relations with Britain are in fact so close and so complex, is somehow to interfere with the larger and wider association which the House approved when it adopted the Fulbright resolution.

THIS OPINION is entitled to complete respect. But it is, I submit, completely mistaken. I think it can be demonstrated beyond reasonable doubt that the British-American connection, whether it rests on formal agreement or better still upon common sense, cannot possibly be exclusive, and that it must in the nature of the circumstances become increasingly inclusive. It cannot be exclusive because, as we have seen, the British have alliances, particularly with Russia, which they mean to cultivate, which they would not conceivably renounce willingly. On our part we have the substance of alliances with all the American republics, excepting only the Argentine for the time being, which we would not renounce willingly.

It can be demonstrated, too, I believe, that as we remain closely associated with Britain, which is already allied with Russia, the likelihood of an alliance or concert by agreement between Russia and the United States is enhanced. The allies of allies must tend to become allies. The surer our agreements with Britain and Russia, the more the assurance that China, which is much nearer in fact to Russia and Britain than to us, will not become isolated from the emerging world community.

COLLECTIVE SECURITY, which is a rather awkward name for the most desirable of all political ideals, is not something which can be evoked by one resounding general agreement. It has to be made by knitting together the constituent states, by resolving their serious differences and by finding their vital common interests. That is what we have been doing with the British. That is what we are engaged in doing with the Russians. That is what we must do with the French, the Poles, the Scandinavians, the Low Countries and the central Europeans.

Collective security is the goal. Everyone knows that. Anyone can say it. The real problem of the statesman is how to reach the goal, now in fact and not in ambiguous words to knit together all the states that have the means to wage great wars so that they may in the future prevent great wars.

THE PROCESS, the ways and means, of achieving collective security, have not been sufficiently studied by many of the most ardent advocates of the idea. Let them take heed lest in their ardor for an all-embracing association to keep world peace, they obstruct and oppose the practical measures by which their hopes may eventually be realized. The great mansion cannot be built by beginning with the decoration of the living rooms. First there must be dug the deep foundations and there must be created the great structural shapes which will make the edifice stand and hold together.

And though this work, now in progress, is hard, and requires dealing with the elemental stone and iron of national interest, strategical position, and power, it is absolutely necessary, it is absolutely essential, if we are not once again, as we did in 1919, to build a house of cards. So I say the idealists should not be jubilant at the prospect of difficulties with our nearest and greatest ally, or they will be counted among those who make the best the enemy of the good.

President Asks Promotions for 14 Generals

President Roosevelt sent to the Senate yesterday nominations for promotions in permanent rank for 14 of the Army's top ranking officers in the field and at home, with an added request that Congress waive provisions of law which otherwise would prevent advancement for five of them.

To have the permanent rank of major general, the President nominated the five following temporary lieutenant generals:

Jonathan M. Wainwright, Joseph W. Stilwell, George Smith Patton, jr., Brehon B. Somervell and Joseph T. McNarney.

Their promotions were spaced one day apart, with Wainwright's becoming effective September 1, others following. General Wainwright now is a prisoner of the Japanese, having been taken at the fall of Corregidor, where he succeeded Gen. Douglas MacArthur in command of American forces.

Seven who hold the temporary rank of lieutenant general were recommended for promotion to the permanent rank of brigadier general. They include George C. Kenney, Carl Spaatz, Omar Nelson Bradley, Ira C. Eaker, Millard F. Harmon, Robert L. Eichelberger, and Mark Wayne Clark.

Two temporary major generals were recommended for the permanent rank of brigadier general. They are Thomas T. Handy and Walter B. Smith.

In a memorandum to the President of the Senate, President Roosevelt noted that five men on the promotion list—Kenney, Clark, Handy, Eaker and Smith—have less than the legally prescribed 28 years of continuous commissioned service required by the National Defense Act as a prerequisite to appointment as a brigadier general in the regular Army.

"The provisions of the National Defense Act quite evidently had in mind peacetime conditions, because it is not conceivable that a lieutenant general, for example, in highly successful command of the Fifth Army in Italy, or of our Air Forces engaged with the enemy in the Southwest Pacific, is not qualified for appointment as a Brigadier General of the regular Army," the President said.

Landon Assails 'Hush' Policy On Alliances

By the Associated Press

Topeka, Kans., Oct. 1.—Alf M. Landon said today he feared the mind of the American people is being conditioned for "the old fashioned balance of power alliance that will hang like a mill stone around the neck of generations yet unborn."

Opposing a "hush-hush policy" in discussing postwar alliances, the 1936 Republican Presidential nominee asserted in a radio speech prepared for the Columbia Broadcasting System (at 10 a. m. CWT) that plain talk would help clear the air of suspicion.

He said this country should use its power and influence to restrain imperialism.

"But how can we talk to Russia about the rights of small nations while we are talking about a partnership with imperialistic Britain?

"If the British-American alliance were to continue for a good many years, as Churchill suggests, how are you going to unscramble the eggs when, if ever, it ends?" Landon inquired.

Charging the Administration with mismanagement of foreign affairs and with a "hallelujah policy that America will clothe, feed, educate and rebuild the world," Landon said it "must not be trusted with any more blank checks either at home or in foreign policies."

When the American taxpayer realizes that the world expects lease-lend to be continued for years after the peace comes, the former Kansas Governor continued, "he is likely to put his hands in his pockets and walk off from a lot of world chores that could and should be done—especially so when he realizes that lease-lend means an out-right gift.

"If the world is planning for us to be its postwar sugar daddy with lease-lend, WPA, relief and rehabilitation, etc., etc., it is evident that America is likely to turn in revolt not only on the hallelujah program, but along with it, on the program highly necessary on the whole of reasonable world collaboration and cooperation."

Army Fails To Reenlist 15,000 WACS

By Ann Cottrell

N. Y. Herald Tribune Bureau.

About 15,000 members of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, or almost one-fourth of the total strength of 65,000, failed to reenlist when the organization was converted into the Women's Army Corps under a law which gave the members the right to drop out by September 30 if they did not want to sign up in the new corps.

Col. Oveta Culp Hobby, who was reached in St. Paul last night several hours after the War Department announcement yesterday, expressed surprise and disappointment over the result, saying that the loss of 343 officers and 14,607 auxiliaries presented "a figure much higher than we liked." But she added: "There is no point in grieving over the departed ones—we must have more enlistments."

Although she recognized the validity of the many reasons offered by the War Department for the failure of many WAAC's to transfer to the WAC—which is a component of the Army—Colonel Hob by admitted that a number quit "because they wanted to."

Chief reasons given by the War Department for the failure of the women to reenlist were the inability of many to pass a strict physical test and cases of personal responsibilities. Among the latter were death or illness of parents creating a dependency situation; shortages of help on farms; marriage and a desire to establish a home; and change of marital status involving the return of a husband from military service.

Colonel Hobby, who was in St. Paul conferring with heads of all the other women's services at a rally sponsored by the Women's City Club, said that "a great many are reenlisting." With the loss of the 14,940 members, the corps now numbers about 50,060, much less than half of the authorized strength of 150,000, which the Army would like to reach this year. At present an all-States recruiting campaign is being pressed to enlist more than 70,000 WACS.

OPA Explains New Ration Token System

The Office of Price Administration yesterday outlined its plans for use of the ration tokens which will be put in circulation early in 1944.

The tokens, to be used as change for processed foods and meats-fats stamps, will be made of plastic or glass, will be slightly larger than a nickel and will be inscribed to designate the foods for which they are good.

Bids on the manufacture of an initial supply of 900 million of the disks—400 million blue and 500 million red—will be opened here Monday.

Each token will have a value of one point and will have no expiration date. The blue ones will be used as change for processed-food stamps and the red for red meats-fats stamps.

All red and blue stamps will be assigned a uniform value of 10 points when the tokens are placed in use, OPA said. Thus a customer making an 8-point blue-stamp purchase would receive two blue stamps as change, to be used at any time.

Through the use of tokens and uniform stamp values, OPA expects War Ration Book 4, scheduled for distribution late this month, to last approximately two years.

New Disaster Visits Ancient City of Pompeii

By Relman Morin

Associated Press Staff Writer

With the Fifth Army in Italy, Sept. 29—(Delayed)—(AP).—Disaster has returned to the scene of ancient tragedy, piling new wreckage on the storied ruins of Pompei.

The Germans, fighting a desperate rearguard action, fell back along the road which passes through both the old city and its modern namesake. British artillery harried the Germans along the whole line, which is barely 15 miles from Naples, and from time to time Nazi suicide squads attempting to delay the British advance returned the fire.

The roar of heavy guns echoed against the slope of Vesuvius and the ground trembled in what must have been a close approximation to the catastrophe that overtook Pompei nearly 2000 years ago.

The Germans had been using the ancient amphitheater as a camp ground and the marks of their tanks and trucks were plainly visible all around the ruins. The amphitheater itself was damaged by bombs and shells. A number of other buildings and temples also were hit.

Craters Pit Ground

Craters pit the ground around the columns where the law courts once stood, while here and there flagstones have been tossed about like children's toys.

There was no time to examine the ruins at leisure, however, for only 500 yards ahead British armored units were blasting at the German rearguard.

By early this afternoon the British had pounded the Germans back into the town of Torre Annunziata, 12 miles from Naples. A duplicate of the previous day's bitter street fighting in Scafati immediately developed. Snipers' bullets whined through the streets and German self-propelled guns thundered from behind mounds as the British entered.

Like so many other towns along the bloody road to Naples this one is smashed to bits. It is nothing but a heap of stones, broken roofs, sagging walls and tangled skeins of electric wire.

Some of the people leave these towns that are caught in the path of war, but hundreds—even thousands—cling to their homes, shivering behond locked doors through the worst shelling and street fighting.

Want to Fight Germans

As the fighting passes they begin to emerge. They almost all are hysterical, either from joy or grief or prolonged fear.

Some know where German snipers are hidden. They procure rifles and want to go with the troops to kill the Germans themselves.

The first sight of a British or American uniform usually touches off a cry "it's finished, it's finished! The Germans have gone."

They cavort like children, and then suddenly a sniper's rifle cracks and they disappear.

By Aircraft Unit

Tightening Of Job-Freeze Order Urged

The National Aircraft War Production Council yesterday urged that the present system of job releases be tightened by penalizing employers or workers who fail to comply with established procedure.

The War Manpower Commission requires workers in essential industries to secure job-releases or "certificates of availability" before changing jobs, and employers are forbidden to hire employes from essential work without securing the availability certificate, either from the previous employer or the United States Employment Service.

The aircraft council, representing East and West Coast airplane manufacturers, asked "immediate executive or legislative action to require compliance by both employer and employe."

Continuous Deferment Urged

The council also urged: (1) "continuous draft deferment, for periods of no less than six months, of necessary personnel in aircraft production of the greatest urgency, so long as military and Government authorities decree that the aircraft production program heads the list of weapons essential to victory," and (2) a return to the aircraft industry of men pulled out by the draft "whose skill and training can contribute most to the war effort on the production front, rather than in one of the military services."

"The aircraft companies," a formal statement declared, "are of the opinion that solution of the manpower problem should be sought through voluntary means and cooperation of Government, management and labor, and that national labor conscription should not be considered until and unless all other efforts have failed."

Martin's Explanation

Council Member Glenn L. Martin, president of the Baltimore Airtion, president of the Baltimore aircraft company which bears his name, denied reports that he blocked adoption by the council of a resolution indorsing incentive wage plans as a means of spurring production.

"I did not oppose such plans, but I did oppose as impractical a specific plan for attendance rewards which was offered to the council," Martin said. "In this, I was joined by a number of other members of the board."

Martin said that he did not assert "labor is making enough money already," as reported.

"In a discussion of wage incentives to spur production," the council statement said, "it was agreed that complexities of producing airplanes of constantly changing design make it difficult to arrive at standards applicable throughout the industry. The question was left for individual company decision, but the staff of the national council was instructed to continue studies, in cooperation with military and Government authorities, in an effort to find a uniform and simple standard."

Vote Tuesday On Service Allowances

By the Associated Press

The House Military Committee concluded hearings yesterday on proposals to increase Government allowances to servicemen's dependents. It will vote Tuesday on suggested revisions in present payments.

As the hearings wound up, considerable committee sentiment was evident for cutting off payments to unfaithful wives although the Army has protested strenuously that it does not want to become a "court of domestic relations."

Representative Short (Republican) of Missouri asserted that immoral women are "marrying soldiers they hardly know" to get the dependency allowance, and declared "Congress should give some attention to the fact."

He said there were 50 or 60 such cases in his home district—"harlots free to run around while drawing money from a boy they hardly know."

Basis of Army Opposition

Brig. Gen. H. N. Gilbert, administrator of Army dependency benefits, told the committee the Army would "prefer not to pass on a woman's misconduct" because the time spent in investigating complaints would bog down the administrative machinery necessary for making the payments.

"Most men have an inherent faith in their wives," he commented.

"But people back home know of a woman's misconduct," put in Representative Sparkman (Democrat), Alabama.

"So what?" replied the general. "It is not the function of military services or Government agencies to determine that. Many men are alleging their wives are wayward when, as a matter of fact, they are not."

Proposed Allowances

The House Committee's hearings were on a Senate-approved bill which would set monthly payments to a serviceman's dependents at $50 for a wife, $18 for the first child, and $11 for each additional child. The present figures are $50, $12 and $10.

The Army and Navy generally approved the Senate bill. From others, however, the committee heard proposals that payments be placed on a basis of need, varying in individual cases. The CIO suggested $55 a month for a wife, $35 for the first child and $30 for each additional child.

At the final hearing, Admiral J. O. Richardson, executive vice president of the Navy Relief Society, urged Congress to retain dependency on a flat payment basis. He said a flat allowance is the "only practical method."

Delegate Dimond of Alaska, a nonvoting member of the committee, assailed the allowances in the Senate bill as "simply frivolous." He said they would result in "a starvation diet" and "slum conditions of living" in Alaska and many parts of the United States.

The Gallup Poll

One Group Not Worried Over Meat Rationing; U. S. Survey Indicates 2,800,000 Vegetarians

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 1.—One group of people in the United States have not contributed to the problems and headaches of Prentiss Brown and Chester Bowles of the OPA.

They are the Nation's vegetarians.

Because nobody in the country, not even OPA or the health publications devoted to vegetarianism, knows how many vegetarians there are in the United States, the Institute set out to find the number of those individuals who, because of their indifference to meat, can smile at the harassed housewife trying to buy meat in the local butcher shop.

Cross-Section Polled

Selecting a true cross-section of our adult population by age, sex, income level, religious belief and other factors, the Institute put the following question to the public from coast to coast.

"Some people in the United States are vegetarians, that is, people who eat no fish, fowl or meat of any kind. Do you happen to be a vegetarian?"

When the percentage claiming to be vegetarians is applied to the number of adults in the population, excluding members of the armed forces, the total comes to 2,800,000 vegetarians.

If all those people did eat meat they would consume something like 5,060,000 pounds a week. Hence the meat-eaters can thank the vegetarians for making that amount of meat available to them—if they can get it.

The vegetarians encountered in the survey were asked why they happen to be vegetarians. The principal explanations given by them were reasons having to do with health, with religious or humanitarian considerations, or with taste preferences in food.

Evenly Distributed

So far as geographical location is concerned, the vegetarians seem to be fairly evenly distributed throughout the country. However, more of them are found in cities than are found in small towns or farm areas. Cities of over 100,000 population show the highest percentage of people practicing vegetarianism, the survey finds.

In common usage, a vegetarian, according to authorities on the subject, is one who abstains from flesh foods of all kinds, but who does use milk and eggs, along with products of the vegetable kingdom. In other words, most vegetarians should be described technically as "lacto-ovo-vegetarians." This is generally contracted to "lacto-vegetarians," but even that term is used infrequently, the simple word vegetarian sufficing to describe those who use the nonmeat diet.

Overseas Film Deficiency Probe Demanded

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 1.—Al Jolson reported today fighting men abroad were "so hungry" for entertainment they even patched pieces of film together to make complete reels, and his report brought a demand from the war activities committee of the motion picture industry for a complete investigation.

Jolson, who returned yesterday from two months in Africa and Sicily, his fourth overseas tour, said he had heard many complaints about entertainment, "especially about the movies."

"They want more musical films. Some of the ones they have are so worn the sound is all garbled. I thought I was listening to Arabic instead of English in some that I sat through," the actor said.

Francis S. Harmon, executive vice chairman of the war activities Committee of the motion picture industry, said "reports of serious film deficiencies overseas demand immediate attention of the War Department and such remedial action as a complete investigation by Government authorities may warrant."

Harmon said the War Department had been given 6635 prints of all types of motion pictures, adding the War Department reserved for itself distribution of the films to the fighting fronts. He said he had no way of knowing how many of the prints had been developed to battle areas.

Jolson placed equal emphasis upon demands of the fighting men for more popular types of entertainment in personal appearances.

"They want to see girls—dancing girls and singing girls—and they want other popular entertainment," he said.

He said he thought there had been a decided lack of big names of stage and screen at the entertainment front overseas.

"The boys would give about two months pay to see girls like Rita Hayworth, Betty Grable, Jinx Falkenburg. They should also see more Cantors, Jessels, Haleys, Red Skeltons and such stars, and they would go crazy over bands like Tommy Dorsey's and Harry James'. They don't want Shakespeare. They're kids—they're babies. They want light stuff, but no legitimate ham."

High Test Gas Production Cut

A 10 per cent cut in the production of the better-grade automobile gasoline was ordered by Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes yesterday in a move to step up production of aviation and 80-octane all-purpose military gasoline.

Telegrams have been sent to all refiners on the Pacific Coast to institute the change immediately as "it is imperative that stocks of aviation gasoline and 80-octane military gasoline be built up to meet any demands without delay."

Effect of this action will not be felt at once, but motorists should expect a little more difficulty in starting up their cars during the winter months as the regular brand of gasoline which will be generally available has less volatility.

In another petroleum development, the Office of Price Administration announced that consumers using more than 10,000 gallons of fuel oil annually will be granted fuel rations regardless of whether their equipment can be altered to the use of coal or not.

This statement was in line with a recent announcement by Fuel Administrator Harold L. Ickes that all regulations requiring conversions in heating equipment are suspended for the time being as the growing coal shortage is as serious as the fuel oil shortage.

Changes Urged in Handling of Interned Japs

A special Dies subcommittee investigating un-American activities in Japanese war relocation centers yesterday issued a majority and a minority report agreeing on two out of three recommendations to improve center operations.

Representative Eberharter (Democrat) of Pennsylvania concurred with the majority in recommending that the War Relocation Authority speed segregation of disloyal from loyal Japanese in relocation centers and that WRA institute an Americanization program among Japanese remaining in camps.

Upon the second recommendation of the majority, establishment of a special board composed of officers of the various intelligence agencies of the Federal Government as well as WRA representatives to pass on the release of evacuees from the camps, Eberharter dissented.

He said the WRA was already closely cooperating with intelligence agencies.

Chief reason for issuance of the minority report appeared to lie not in the recomn endations but in the material covered in the majority's document.

Eberharter protested because the majority repeated the charge that evacuees were being supplied better food than the average American is receiving.

"This charge," Eberharter said, "is repeated in the report of the majority members but it is not brought out that the evidence received before the subcommittee completely rebutted the charge."

Members signing the majority report were Representative Dies (Democrat) of Texas, chairman; Starnes (Democrat) of Alabama; Costello (Democrat) of California; Mason (Republican) of Illinois; Thomas (Republican) of New Jersey, and Mundt (Republican) of South Dakota.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Of all the silly double-talk ever spouted, Branch Rickey's statement on the state of the Dodgers hits a new rhetorical low. Rickey, in an attempt to clarify the status of Manager Leo Durocher has succeeded merely in re-muddling the muddled question of how Durocher stands with the Dodgers.

POVICH

Rickey issued a statement the other day, but what goes on in Brooklyn is still something to be ferreted from the devious by-ways of the general manager's mind. Certainly he gave no clew when he announced "Durocher will be given his unconditional release from his player-manager contract, effective at the close of the season, but may negotiate for a return as bench manager."

The man on the street in Flatbush is already demanding to know, in forthright Brooklynese, "What gives?" If Durocher has been fired, what's all the horsing around about re-hiring him? Do you mean it and, anyway, why don't you come clean?

If Rickey wants to re-hire Durocher as a bench manager, there was no call in the first place for him to fire Durocher as a player-manager. It would be a simple matter just to hand Durocher a routine manager's contract and ask, or tell him to sign. It doesn't require a pronunciamento by Rickey.

What Rickey's intentions are nobody can tell, least of all from what he has said. When he stated Durocher "may negotiate" for a return as a bench manager, that was quite meaningless. There is no assurance that Durocher will be given the job. At least Rickey didn't say he would. That "negotiate" business could be a lot of malarkey. There's nothing, in fact, that would forbid Durocher, or Rickey either, to "negotiate" for the Presidency of the United States.

If anything Rickey said can be interpreted at all, it would probably only add to the confusion. If he doesn't want Durocher as a playing-manager, wotinell is he talking about anyway? Durocher in the last two years has played exactly six games for the Dodgers. For two years, that is exactly what everybody presumed the Dodgers have had, a non-playing manager. And now Rickey fires him as a playing manager.

Rickey could know, of course, exactly what he wants without letting anybody in on it. Perhaps his statement firing Durocher with a hint of re-hiring him is a device to beat down Durocher's salary. During his long regime with the Cardinals, Rickey was noted for the peasant pay of even the Cardinals' pennant-winning teams. When he moved to Brooklyn, the Dodgers' salaries probably flabbergasted him and he undoubtedly has designs on the overhead.

What Rickey has done already has been to humiliate Durocher, who says he still wants the Brooklyn job. Now, Durocher has to go on something tantamount to bended knee and ask Rickey for the position. A man in that position can't, of course, command the salary of a managerial candidate who is not a job hunter. But if Rickey wanted to humiliate Durocher, why did he have to make it so public?

There was a ring of bitterness toward Durocher in the way Rickey amplified the point he was making, when he said, "If Durocher wants to make a connection elsewhere he will be free to do so . . . free to negotiate for the Dodgers' managership or some other job in baseball, or in radio or Hollywood."

That last crack smacked of a dirty crack by Rickey. Durocher's predilection for personal appearances on the radio networks and the friendship of Hollywood personalities is well known. Perhaps Rickey doesn't like it. Brother Rickey himself is a very righteous person who still refuses to attend baseball games on the Sabbath, and he may not be fond of Durocher's flamboyant associates of the screen world.

There was another crack by Rickey which read like this: "My manager must be a man who wants to manage the Dodgers more than anything else in the world." That could have been a sly reference to Durocher's after-game activities. Durocher's friends and Rickey's friends don't quite move in the same circles.

Rickey reads the papers, too. Maybe he didn't like the idea of the Dodgers being managed by a celebrated divorce case figure or, perhaps, by a fellow with income tax troubles with Durocher qualifying for both labels. Rickey has never found it a struggle to fire a manager, anyway. He fired Rogers Hornsby, Bill McKechnie, Gabby Street and Jimmy Wilson after they had won pennants with the Cardinals. He could always lay his hands on a new manager whenever he saw the need.

Frankly, we don't like Durocher's chances, even before hearing Brother Rickey out on the subject.

Coolidge Beats Tech, 12-0; Wilson Wins, 26-0

Here's Addie Bassin, the Colts' new-found star ball-carrier, pictured as he clicked off a 54-yard run that paved the way for a 12-0 victory over Tech yesterday in the public high series. Bassin, much in evidence all afternoon, finally was brought down on Tech's 16-yard line. Tech's Joe Buell (No. 5) and Red Bladen (No. 11) are shown.

Surprising Colts Take Series Lead; Central Outclassed by Tigers

Bassin Stars With 54-Yard Run for Colts, Tosses Scoring Pass; Wilson Has Power; Roosevelt and Anacostia to Clash Today

Coolidge High footballers proved yesterday that their victory over Wilson last week was no flash in the pan as they trampled Tech, 12 to 0, and Wilson came back to the credit side of the ledger with a 26-0 defeat of outclassed Central.

Thus Coolidge, which up to last week hadn't won a high school series game, stood at the top of the football heap today, with two victories, no losses. Western has a victory over Tech to its credit and no interhigh game this weekend. (Western's game with Washington-Lee yesterday was postponed to 3:30 p. m. today because of wet grounds.) Tech and Central are at the bottom with two losses apiece, and Anacostia and Roosevelt, both winners last week, play the spot game of the week at Central Stadium at 2 p. m. today.

Coolidge Wins, 12-0; Bassin Star

Coolidge High's Colts, rather unimpressive despite victory last week, went about defeating Tech's eleven yesterday in a businesslike manner that stamped them as serious factors in the Public high championship series. Coolidge won, 12-0, before a spirited crowd of 1500 at Tech Stadium.

Coach Gilbert Conn's boys, woefully weak on ground attack a week ago, hit their stride and ripped off gain after gain against the McKinley eleven. In addition, Coolidge's defense, especially against passes, failed to allow Tech one sustained drive during the 40 minutes.

In Addie Bassin, brother of Harry Bassin, former Eastern High and Georgetown University star, Coolidge showed one of the best backs of the series. The fleet youngster, making a serious football bid for the first time, exhibited oodles of speed and ability to cut loose that at one time carried him 54 yards for the longest run of the game.

Finally Stopped

This gallop, on which he was finally hauled down on Tech's 16-yard line, led to the first Coolidge touchdown. After the Colts' drive bogged down and Bob Webb's field goal try went astray, Tech took over the ball. Joe Buell attempted to pass for Tech and was trapped and thrown heavily by Lang, a substitute Coolidge end. Buell fumbled and Colt Guard Ray Harrison recovered on Tech's 10.

Coolidge went nowhere on two line plays and then Bassin faded back and shot a stream-line pass into the arms of End Paul Sickle beyond the goal.

The Colts' other touchdown came in the last two minutes of play. Tech went to the air in desperation. Coolidge's John Schullenberger intercepted one of the tosses and as he was being tackled, he lateraled the ball in the direction of Chauncey Greenbaum. The ball struck the ground, bounded into Greenbaum's arms and the youngster hotfooted 21 yards to a touchdown that sealed the Coolidge victory.

Tech, with Red Bladen supplying the punch, showed flashes of attack power in the opening half. However, poor punting forced them back. Coolidge showed a strong line plunger in Dick Bergmann, who scored against Wilson last week.

Make Long Drive

With Bergmann and Bassin doing most of the gaining, Coolidge made two excursions into Tech territory in the first half. The chief scoring threat came in the closing minutes of the second period. The Colts banged their way to a first down and goal to go. Tech braced, however, and held Coolidge for downs, the ball being inches from the line on the last try.

Bergmann was shaken up in the second period and was used only sparingly thereafter.

Guards Harrison and Frank Cullers, backed by Center Barry Shields, were a bulwark for Coolidge. The Colt backs, particularly Schullenberger punted well for debut, were strong on defense. Greenbaum, making his series Coolidge.

Wilson's Power Swamps Central

A humbled Central football team went down to its worst defeat in years yesterday before the onslaught of rejuvenated Wilson, which came back from its drubbing by Coolidge last week to walk off Central Stadium with a 26-0 score under its belt.

The once-mighty Vikings looked just about as bad as the score indicated. The breaks were against them, including one holding penalty which practically put the ball over for one Wilson score, but it was more than that, for Central's plays weren't clicking and its tackling was off.

Looked Winners From Start

Though the Tigers didn't score in the first period, they looked like the winners from the start. Wilson was pulling off some nice passes, and it was one of these which set the stage for the first touchdown, a long one from Haycock to Keith down near the end zone on a fourth down. Henry took it over.

Wilson began another march down the field in the same period, but the Central line stiffened just before the goal was reached and the Vikings took the ball on downs. Crandall took the ball behind the goal and started a running play around the end, but two Wilson men, Sandmeyer and Fitch were on him for the safety. That made the score at the half 8-0.

Wilson threatened throughout the period, running an interception down the field for a big gain and never letting Central really get off the defensive. It was just as the period ended that Wilson had the ball on the Central eight and the Vikings received a five-yard holding penalty. That gave the Tigers a score on the second play of the last quarter.

Brown Intercepts Pass

Not many plays later, Stu Brown intercepted a Central pass and went 45 yards for another one. It was a sweetheart of a run. It was on that score that Wilson made its only effective conversion, the ball sailing cleanly between the bars. But both teams were offsides on the play and the ball was called back. The repeat performance failed.

The ball stayed close to midfield for a while, for a change, then Wilson began another march. It was climaxed by a 38-yard pass from Behrens to Quinn for a touchdown, with Godfrey doing a magnificent job of blocking for the receiver. The ball game ended a few plays later, 26-0.

Dorazio Ill, Bivins Bout Is Postponed

The Gus Dorazio-Jimmy Bivins fight, scheduled for October 13 at Uline Arena, last night was postponed for at least two or three weeks, Promoter Goldie Ahearn announced following receipt of a telegram informing him Dorazio was ill in bed at his Philadelphia home with a bad case of grippe.

Unwilling at first to postpone the bout, which he confidently expected to sell-out Uline's with a raised seating capacity of close to 10,000, Ahearn long-distanced Palermo and suggested the announcement be delayed a few days pending Dorazio's possible recovery. But Palermo insisted Dorazio was a sick fellow, had lost close to 11 pounds, was suffering with chills and fever, and was confined to bed. It would be impossible, Palermo said, for Dorazio to get into first class shape for Bivins, the "Duration champ," and Gus refused to meet the Cleveland Negro unless in tip-top condition.

Palermo's telegram read:

"Sorry Dorazio laid up with grippe. Impossible to train for Bivins for October 15. Please inform if can postpone for two or three weeks. Want Dorazio in tip-top shape.

(Signed) Frank Palermo.

Ahearn announced he would go through with a fight card despite the postponement with the best bout he could arrange.

Bisons' Manager Quits

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 1 (AP).—Greg Mulleavy, manager of the Buffalo Bisons of the International League during the past season, resigned today. Mulleavy said he had no immediate plans, but was considering two places in minor league circles.

Braves Buy Phillips

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 1 (AP).—The Syracuse Chiefs announced today the conditional sale of Shortstop Damon Phillips to the Boston Braves. If Phillips sticks with the Braves after a trial next spring, Syracuse has the option of taking cash or players to complete the deal.

Gumbert Wins For Cards, 7-1, Over Braves

By International News Service

St. Louis, Oct. 1.—Harry Gumbert emerged from the land of dead-arm pitchers today to hurl the St. Louis Cardinals to a 7-to-1 victory over the New York Giants wit ha six-hit performance.

The champions hopped on Rube Fischer in the sixth inning for five runs on as many hits and the outburst brought in Ace Adams for his sixty-eighth mound appearance of the season.

Adams set a new record for pitching performances early this week.

The Cards ran up a total of 11 hits as Gumbert, recovered from circulation trouble in his right arm, did a neat hill job for the champs.

Navy Eleven Shipshape For Cornell Tonight

Middies Primed for Offensive Play Against Red Raiders at Baltimore

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Oct. 1.—Only light drills were held tonight as Coach John E. (Billick) Whelchel's Navy football squad limbered up under the arcs in preparation for their clash with the Cornell Red Raiders in Baltimore tomorrow night. The kick-off is set for 7 o'clock.

Back and linemen were in good shape, and they seemed to be itching to meet the big Red team which boasts of some A-1 former collegiate gridiron stars.

Cornell has both Navy and Marine Corps units, which are contributing such players as 205-pound blocking back Jim Carrington, a former Fordham player; Blose, a right half who is a powerful kicker and a fast runner, and Calcagni, an outstanding tackle for Penn last year and a player described by one Navy coach as "a better tackle than we've got."

The Tars, at the same time, were in good shape, with four backfield units ready to march down the field.

Although Hillis Hume, Hal Hamberg and Bill Crawley are well-known quantities in the backfield, Whelchel also has such backs, untried until last Saturday, as Bruce Smith, Charlie Guy, Bill Barron, Joe Sullivan and Dick Gay.

Navy is not expected to play a purely defense game, and all indications are the Middies will step out just as smartly and briskly against Cornell as they did against North Carolina Preflight last Saturday.

Probable lineups:

Cornell.	Position.	Navy.
LaScalla	L.E.	Channell (C.)

Little World Series Opening Is Delayed

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 1 (AP).—The opening game of the Little World Series scheduled for 8:15 (EWT) between the American Association Red Birds and the International League Syracuse Chiefs was postponed today because of weather conditions.

Nats' Rookies Play Against Tigers Tonight

The Nats will unveil a rookie first baseman and shortstop tonight against the Tigers in Griffith Stadium's final night game of the season.

Ed Butka, husky first sacker bought from the Springfield Eastern League Club earlier in the season, will be in the starting lineup as well as Shortstop Charlie Roberts, bought from the Southern Association.

Roberts has played with the Nats in road games but has appeared only as a pinch hitter at Griffith Stadium. Butka in his one appearance for the Nats, doubled against the left field wall as a pinch hitter, driving in a run.

Buck Newsom will be the Nats' pitcher. He will be striving to maintain a better than .500 average for the season. Newsom's combined record with the Brooklyn Dodgers, Browns and Nats this year now reads 13 victories against 12 defeats.

George Case is at a standstill in his basestealing battle with Wally Moses of the White Sox, which now finds them deadlocked at 56 thefts each. Case is out for the rest of the season with a bruised thigh while Moses will participate in two more games for the White Sox at Boston today and tomorrow.

The Nats and Tigers will conclude the season's schedule with a single game tomorrow afternoon. Detroit has won 11 of the 20 games between the clubs thus far.

Brazle's Induction Is Again Delayed

St. Louis, Oct. 1 (AP).—Induction of Alpha Brazle, St. Louis Cardinal pitcher, was postponed again today because his transfer papers had not yet arrived from his Cortez, Colo., draft board. He will be available for the World Series, in any event, during the three-week furlough given to Army inductees.

Harry Walker, the Cords' regular centerfielder, has been ordered to report for induction October 12.

Anacostia-Roosevelt Game Is Feature Today

The week's big game in the high school series will be played at Central Stadium at 2 p. m. today when Anacostia, which made such an impressive showing over Central last week, meets Roosevelt, winner of the game with Eastern last Friday.

The tilt is the first of a series of games which will feature the teams which look like outstanding contenders each week.

Also on schedule today are the Eastern-Episcopal High game at Alexandria, the Western-Washington and Lee game at Arlington, postponed from yesterday, and Devitt at Staunton.

Irish, Michigan, Penn, Navy Favored on Grid Today

By Harold Claassen
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Oct. 1.—Grabbing the brass ring for another whirl through the maze of pre-game rumors to predict this week's results:

Notre Dame over Georgia Tech—Even if George Manning, Georgia Tech's great center, rejoins his teammates this week after sitting out last week's surprising triumph, Notre Dame is the choice because the game will be played before 40,000 partisan fans in South Bend.

Michigan over Northwestern—Northwestern found Indiana tough last week and will discover Michigan an absolute headache this Saturday. The clash of the Big Ten Titans will help keep 50,000 fans excited.

Southern California over California—Another throng of 50,000 expected here. California, as the host club, might make it close but the Trojans have the nod.

Pennsylvania over Yale—The Eli cripples hardly in the same class. Bob Odell, Quaker back, will be a torment to his brother, Howie, who coaches the Yales. Their family dispute will be watched by 30,000.

Navy over Cornell—The Middies to verify the hints that they are one of the East's best before 45,000 in Baltimore under the lights.

Southwestern over Texas—The savvy Dana X. Bible taught his 1942 team will come back to haunt him as Southwestern's Navy-studded squad of 1943. The Wanderers' homecoming to be witnessed by 15,000.

Rice over Louisiana State—Figuring that the Rice forward wall will stop Steve Van Buren and that Glenn Dobbs' passing last week taught the Owls a lesson. At least 20,000 fans will stay up late to see the struggle.

Brown over Holy Cross—In a struggle that's likely to be as tight as a pair of new shoes. Picking Brown because Skip Stahley retains a nucleus of his 1942 squad. They are expecting 20,000.

Great Lakes over Pittsburgh—Something 22,000 sailors will cheer about.

Minnesota over Nebraska—Hardly in a class with their battles of recent years but still good enough to attract 35,000.

Columbia over Princeton—The Tigers haven't forgotten that 47 to 9 drubbing of a week ago. Both teams to score plenty with the 20,000 fans in an uproar all the way.

North Carolina over Penn State—Those Carolina Sailors out to redeem themselves.

Purdue over Illinois—Tony Butkovich and Alex Agase, former Illini but now Boilermakers, have prepared a welcome for their old mates and have invited 15,000 guests.

Army over Colgate — The Cadets to give Andy Kerr's outfit a cold gate.

Duke over North Carolina Preflight—Duke hasn't been scored on in two games, has collected 101 points for itself.

Iowa over Wisconsin — The home crowd to give the Hawkeyes the edge in a game that is even otherwise.

Iowa Preflight over Iowa State—Even with the officers on the sidelines, the Seahawks appear too strong.

Memphis Naval Air over Tulane—Another free-scoring fray with the Memphis Blues coming out on top.

Ohio State over Missouri—The Buckeye freshmen tossed a fright into the Iowa Preflight sailors. Two of last week's losers will attract a crowd of 20,000.

Maryland Seeks First Victory Against Wake Forest Today

Troll Slated To Start in Backfield

Tushak Expected To Handle Passing For Old Liners Against Deacons

University of Maryland's green but willing gridders today go after their first victory for the second time in this infant football season under the Doc Spears' regime, meeting Wake Forest's Demon Deacons at 2:30 p. m. at Byrd Stadium, College Park.

Snuffed out of what looked like a certain 7-0 victory last week when the Curtis Bay Coast Guard Cutters suddenly took to the air to register, 13-7, with a last period splurge, the Old Liners today will present a somewhat juggled backfield array against the North Carolinians after a succession of Spears' experiments during heavy practice sessions this week.

Former Central Ace to Start

Slated to see much action after impressive debuts against the Cutters are Bob Troll, former Central High ace, and Dick Tushak, a Detroit lad who almost single-handedly pulled the game out of the fire for the Terps in the final minute in a drive which started with the kickoff and ended on the Cutters' 2-yard line. Troll, who showed plenty of drive and ball carrying ability will start in place of Gordon Taylor, provided his pulled muscle is sufficiently recovered—and Doc Spears thinks it is. Tushak will be held in reserve until it is deemed time for Maryland to go into the air, then he will go in at quarterback in place of the fine punting Joe Makar.

Practice for the week also stressed pass defense, against which the Terps proved woefully weak, and perfecting a series of new quick opening plays operating off Spears' familiar T-formation.

Backfield of Veterans

Coach D. C. Walker, of the Deacons, will be able to call on a backfield composed mainly of veterans. Russ Perry, at fullback, is an excellent ball carrier and fine punter while Halfbacks Nick Sacrinty and Jeff Brogdon are both juniors who have seen collegiate service. Elmer Barbour, quarterback, is rated as one of the better line-backer-ups in the South.

The Deacons fell last week in their debut, 24-20 to Camp Davis and lost their pair of first-string ends in Al Cernugel and Art Copeland, who did not accompany the team. Dave Harris and Johnny Bruno will replace them. The balance of the lineup is intact.

The lineups:

Wake Forest.	Position.	Maryland.
Bruno	L.E.	McCarthy
Garrison	L.T.	Jacobsen
Ratterree	L.G.	Karangelen
Starford	Center	Bobenko
D. Harris	R.G.	Daly
D. Hobbs	R.T.	Cooper
D. Harris	R.E.	Fice
Barbour	Q.B.	Makar
Sacrinty	L.H.	Troll
Brogdon	R.H.	Hickman

Musial's Ankle Is Injured, but Not Seriously

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Oct. 1.—Stan Musial, National League batting champion and hitting mainstay of the St. Louis Cardinals in the coming World Series, suffered a sprained ankle during today's game with the New York Giants, but Manager Billy Southworth said the injury was not serious.

The mishap occurred as Musial ran out a grounder in the fifth inning. He was out at first on the play, but as he crossed the bag, he fell to the ground. Southworth explained his right ankle was sprained. The outfielder was replaced in the game by Deb Garms, but Southworth said he was taken out just for a rest.

Earl Sande Back In Saddle Today Against Old-Timers

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 1.—Earle Sande is coming back to the races again as a jockey tomorrow.

The handy guy, winner of three Kentucky Derbies—Zev, 1923; Flying Ebony, 1925, and Gallant Fox, 1930—and the "golden boy" of the race tracks through the '20s, will be one of four former jockeys aboard stable ponies in a quarter-mile race for old-time riders at Belmont. The event will be part of the day's war bond program.

Another former Derby winner—Johnny McCabe, who piloted Old Rosebud in the 1914 run for the roses—also will be in the quartet of one-time stars. The other two are Nick Huff, who was aboard The Porter in several of his best races, and Frank Keogh, who rode Wise Counsellor.

Lewis, Hubert Clash Monday On Arena Card

Stoney Lewis, local Negro middleweight who was fighting main bouts last winter before his trick shoulder, which insisted on jumping out of place in the middle of bouts forced his temporary retirement, returns to action here Monday night on the Harry Jeffra-Johnny Cockfield card at Turner's Arena, meeting Tee Hubert, clever newcomer from the South, who has been campaigning in District rings with success.

The bout, an eight-round semi-final, will find both boys boosting a string of six straight victories. Stoney, since his return to the ring, has fought in North Carolina, Virginia and Baltimore in ringing up his triumphs, while Hubert has knocked off Speedy Duvall, Lambertine Williams, Jimmy Hill, Hubert Tate, Kid Fleming and Mark Williams, the latter pair via the kayo route.

A special six-rounder also was closed out yesterday by Promoter Joe Turner, in which Aaron Perry, local Negro lyightweight who is under the wing of Harry Garsch, who handled Bruce Flowers, meeting Mario Gentile, a newcomer to the local fist-swinging gentry.

Both Jeffra and Cockfield are due to wind up heavy training today, Jeffra in Baltimore's Century Club gym, and Cockfield at Turner's Arena. Jeffra, who whipped Davey Crawford the other night in New York following his recent victory here at Griffith Stadium over Billy Banks, rules a 2-to-1 favorite.

Redskins Face Commodores in Scrimmage Today

By the Associated Press

Bainbridge, Md., Oct. 1.—Coach Joe Maniaci plans a few changes in the Bainbridge Naval Training Station Commodore's starting lineup for scrimmage with the Washington Redskins tomorrow.

Maniaci will use Louis Sossamon, South Carolina's All-American pivotman, and Garrard Ramsey, All-American guard for William & Mary last season, will replace injured Capt. Len Akin, formerly with the Chicago Bears.

In the backfield will be Bill Decorrevont, Northwestern's passing ace, at quarterback; Bill Dutton of Pitt and Don Durdan of Oregon State as halfbacks; Harvey John, William & Mary, will hold down the fullback post.

A crowd of 10,000 recruits in training at the naval station will be spectators of the scrap with the 'Skins at Tome Field.

Army Play Cast Will Initiate Service Center

First G. I. customers of the Capitol Park Hotel will be the "Army Play by Play" cast, which will preview the newest of Washington's centers for transient servicemen next week.

But it will be at least two weeks before the hotel, still populated by plasterers, painters and furniture movers only, officially becomes quarters for the military and their wives and babies, as the United Nations Service Center.

In the shadow of Union Station, the converted hotel will provide sleeping, lounging, eating, writing, recreation and laundry facilities for uniformed newcomers to the city and those with an hour to spare before train time.

While crews worked doubletime yesterday to hurry opening of the project, a tour of the dismantled hotel was made by Mrs. William Galvin, secretary of the war hospitality committee, sponsors of the center; Harold Buckles, secretary to Representative John Tolan (Democrat) of California; Harry G. Hunter, assistant commissioner of the PBA; M. L. Ramsay, director of information of FWA; Henry J. Sullivan, assistant regional director of FWA; Capt. John H. Simpson, Army special service officer, and reporters. The survey was made at the suggestion of Buckles, acting for Representative Tolan, who recently introduced a resolution to convert the Senate garage into sleeping and lounging quarters for servicemen.

While the officers' entrance is located in the hotel lobby, enlisted men have their choice of two stairways leading down to the hotel's basement. Here the boys in uniform may check their caps and jackets, eat a light snack and make reservations or receive information about local recreation facilities. The sub-basement is devoted to them, too—with a laundry equipped with 30-minute drying service and two "nude" lounges for relaxation while their clothes are drying.

The first floor, mezzanine and fifth and sixth floors will be turned over to officer personnel, but all other space will be made available to enlisted men, their wives and babies, and uniformed women.

T. O. Klath Dies Abroad

Stockholm, Oct. 1 (AP).—Thormod Oscar Klath, 52, Commercial Attache of the United States Embassy in Stockholm, died today. A native of Sioux City, Iowa, Klath was a graduate of the National Law School, Washington, D. C., and served five years in the Department of the Interior, and three years in the Department of Commerce, joining the department's foreign service in 1919.

Juvenile Clinic Opens Here Despite Lack of Equipment

Dr. Stanley Geshell sat yesterday in the as-yet bare clinic of Juvenile Court and began laying the groundwork to aid in solving one of Washington's most serious problems—juvenile delinquency.

Dr. Geshell is the new psychiatrist attached to the court and heads the section which will deal with prevention of juvenile crime and the suppression of the factors which might lead to adult criminals.

Appointed yesterday to assist him were Dr. Lillie Brunschwig, a psychologist, and Mrs. June Hadlow, a nurse. At present, there is only one desk, two telephones and three chairs in the clinic, but Dr. Geshell hopes it will soon be furnished. He has already begun reading cases here preparatory to interviewing.

"Ours is a serious task and we hope to set up the teamwork that will aid Judge Bentley in her work."

He said the general methods to be used are:

The psychologist will make mental tests to determine the intelligence of the subject. Then he will conduct medical examinations and neuro-psychiatric tests. Added to this will be the environmental investigations of Virginia Clary, social-service director of the court.

"From all of this we hope to get a complete picture of the child's background and effect the necessary adjustments. Generally, it is due to a family difficulty."

3 Indicted by D. C. Grand Jury In $4000 Theft From Treasury

An indictment charging larceny of 4000 one dollar bills from the Treasury Department was returned by the District Grand Jury yesterday against three Bureau of Engraving and Printing shipping laborers.

The defendants, all Negroes, are Clifton A. Hall, 43, of 224 H st. nw.; Ernest Talford, 17, 1230 7th st. nw., and Tettie I. Moore, 18, 1110 5th st. nw.

The indictment charges that on August 30, while the three were employed in the shipping room of the Bureau Annex, Talford ripped open a package of bills to be shipped to the Federal Reserve Bank in Chicago. He is said to have divided the bills between his companions. The money was secreted under their belts when they left the building, it was said. Part of the money was spent, the rest buried in a steel box in a manila bag in Dean's Woods at Connecticut ave. and Florida ave. Secret Service agents recovered $3154.

2 Murder Indictments

The indictment was one of 30 returned before Justice David A. Pine and prepared by Assistant United States Attorney Sylvan Schwartz.

Two indictments charging first-degree murder were handed down. Rollins J. Gray, 24, Negro, was charged with the fatal knifing of Lillian Smith, 24, Negro, at 627 W st. nw., on July 3, and he was also charged with assault with a dangerous weapon on another woman.

Howard R. Phillips, Negro, 38, was charged with the fatal shooting on September 2 of Mary E. Williams, 25, Negro, at his home at 1107 4th st. nw.

Harry W. Gaither, 35, Negro, of 36½ G st. nw., was charged with the larceny in interstate transit of 153 cartons of cigarettes from a truck he was driver of.

James W. Smith, 22, of 1205 N st. nw., was charged with stealing $999 and a $1 wallet belonging to James K. Harms, 1215 Delafield pl. nw., a fellow-employe at the Washington Terminal.

Ernest H. Montague, 21, Negro, a messenger, of 59 Myrtle st. ne., was charged with the lifting of $787.36 from a safe at the Western Union office at 3007 14th st. nw.

Other True Bills

Unauthorized use of an automobile—Henry E. Higgins.

General Clark Visits Front Lines in Jeep

With the Fifth Army in Italy, Sept. 30 (Delayed) (INS).—Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, Commander of the Fifth Army, bounced up to the front lines in a jeep today and conferred with officers while German machine-gun bursts splattered the road 100 yards ahead.

Though coated with the white dust which marks all travelers on roads hereabouts, General Clark appeared vigorous and fresh.

G. A. C. Christiancy, Pershing's Friend, Dies

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—George A. C. Christiancy, 81, one time acting assistant United States Attorney General and a close friend of Gen. John J. Pershing, died today. A resident of Washington, D. C., for many years, he was one of the founders there of the National Junior Republic, a youth organization.

A native of Monroe, Mich., he was the son of Isaac P. Christiancy, a United States Senator from that State and once United States Minister to Peru.

Jesse L. Gladmon, Ex-Builder, Leader Of Masons, Dies

Jesse Lee Gladmon, 81, prominent Masonic leader and retired builder, died yesterday at his home, 51 Elm ave., Takoma Park, Md. A descendant of the earliest settlers of Maryland, he was the son of Burgess K. and Eliza Edmonson Gladmon.

Mr. Gladmon was past master of Chillum Castle Lodge No. 186, F. & A. M.; past high priest of Maryland Royal Arch Chapter No. 38, Kensington; past master of King Solomon Council No. 13, and Montgomery Commandery No. 13, Knights Templar, Rockville.

He also was past president of the Southern Maryland Past Masters Association and past patron of the Silver Spring Chapter No. 66, Order of the Eastern Star.

He is survived by two daughters, Miss Florence E. Gladmon and Miss Eleanor Alice Gladmon of Takoma Park, Md.; three sisters, Mrs. Neville Dowden, Mrs. Grace D. Pearce and Mrs. Helen G. Purdum of Takoma Park, D. C.

Funeral services will be held Monday at 2:30 p. m. at the Warner Pumphrey funeral home, 8434 Georgia ave., Silver Spring. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

"Better Leather—Brighter Shine"

Although "Put Your Feet In Our Hands" is not our real slogan, please consider it a standing invitation.

Hanover salesmen, you'll find, are "professional" fitters... men who know the way the human foot works and the way a shoe must fit to avoid fatigue and discomfort.

But fit depends on more than the fitter—it depends on the shoes as well. Today, spurred on by wartime demands, our master shoemakers have designed as fine a Hanover Shoe as we've ever made; equal in quality and sturdiness to shoes costing two to three times as much!

We want you to prove these facts to yourself. Put your ration book in your pocket, drop in, and put your feet in our hands.

District Still Behind Quota In Bond Sales

10-Million-Dollar Total Needed Here As Nation Soars Beyond 16 Billion

An estimated 10 million dollars this morning separates Washington from a home-front victory in the Third War Loan Drive.

Total sales through Thursday amounted to 81 million, 86.2 per cent of the goal, and it is believed purchases yesterday were three million.

Meanwhile nationally the war loan is more than a billion dollars over the top with a full day still to go. The Treasury reported 688 million dollars in new sales to send to total to 16 billion 220 million dollars.

Sales in the District through yesterday placed the Nation's Capital ahead of the Second War Loan total by more than five million. The drive last spring reached $78,700,000.

Individual Buying Drops

The District War Finance Division revealed late yesterday individual purchases here have been less than half of the expected number. Only 23 million of a 50-million-dollar quota has been subscribed by individuals, it was said, and the drive to buy a group of carrier-based planes was nine million short.

Officials pointed out again that though the drive ends officially today remittances for Series E, F, and G bonds received at the Federal Reserve Bank through October 16 will count toward the quota.

With this fact in mind it is expected the District drive will go over the top.

Bond activity will continue throughout today and the Marilyn Bootery, 1344 F st. nw., again will give free nylon hose to customers who buy a $500 bond.

Meyer Revitz, manager of the shop which last week sold more than $120,000 in bonds by the scheme, said he had only 100 pairs of the precious stockings left.

"They will be given to the first 100 persons who come into the store between 10 a. m. and noon," he said, and emphasized only one pair will be given to a customer.

The Bootery is an accredited bond selling agent of the Treasury Department.

Granville Gude, chairman of the Liberator Club, reported that 56 local citizens so far have subscribed $81,000 toward the purchase of one of the $350,000 airships.

Nine new members in the club were identified as Patricia R. Bastian, Dr. J. B. Gregg Custis, Logan Pingree, John A. Redd, Martin Wiegand, jr., Miss Katie J. Murphy, Mrs. Faye Kent Bebb and Randolph Dodd. Each became a member by pledging at least a $1000 bond.

More Quotas Passed

Other developments yesterday included:

1. E. F. Bartelt, chairman of the Interdepartmental War Savings Bond Committee, reported five new Federal agencies surpassed their quotas. They are Federal Power Commission, 139 per cent; Office of Strategic Services, 109 per cent; Department of Justice, 101 per cent; Library of Congress, 101 per cent, and Office of Education, Federal Security Agency, 100 per cent.

2. Maurice Colbert, chairman of of plumbing and heating industry group, reported sales of $122,294.

3. William Nelson, Kiwanis Club bond head, announced sales of $2,351,000 as compared with a million-and-a-half dollar quota, and A. F. E. Horn, chairman of the Electrical group reported sales totaling $154,350.

4. Harold Pease, National Electrical Machine Shops, Inc., reported the employes bought 160 per cent of its $10,000 quota.

5. Solomon Feldman, war bond chairman of the Beth Sholam Synagogue, announced the congregation's two-day rally held in conjunction with Rosh Hashona services netted $160,000, running the synagogue's Third War Loan total to $410,000.

6. Samuel Rosenfeld, president of George Washington Lodge No. 24 of the Independent Order of Brith Sholem, announced that the club has raised $30,000 in individual sales, with the $75,000 goal expected to be reached by October 16.

Col. Brewer Gets Posthumous Honor

The posthumous award of the Legion of Merit was given to Col. John J. Brewer of 6608 14th st. nw., for his work in training aircraft service personnel in the New Guinea area, it was announced yesterday by Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

The award covered service from November 28, 1942, until May 12 of 1943. His next of kin, his wife, Mrs. Catherine G. Brewer, lives at the 14th st. address.

Workers Told Of 'New Force' In War Fund

Unsuspected powers of sacrifice and a new "driving force" will enable the Community War Fund to be successfully realized in the 1944 campaign, Herbert L. Willett, jr., told 162 workers of the campaign's Government division yesterday afternoon.

The final speaker on a list of six prominent Government workers, Willett, who is executive director of the campaign, said "the war has led us to revise radically our ideas of what is impossible or difficult."

Benefits Explained

Preston Delano, comptroller of currency for the Treasury Department and chairman of the Government division in the campaign to raise $4,800,000, presided at the meeting held in the Statler Hotel.

Other speakers included Oscar Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior; G. W. Garwood, assistant Comptroller of Currency; G. Howland Shaw, Assistant Secretary of State, and Coleman Jennings, campaign chief.

"Washington, already with its prestige as the Capital of the Nation, has an added importance due to the war," Willett said in his talk.

In explaining the benefits of the Community War Fund, the speaker said any community had the juvenile delinquents it deserves and that juvenile delinquency was an index to the community's social health just as typhoid fever was an index to its physical health.

The Major Plans

The campaign embraces three major activities, all of them to be embodied in one drive. They are:

1. USO and other war hospitality.

2. United Nations war relief.

3. Community Chest and other local welfare.

The USO and hospitality services, it was explained, was the vitally important connecting link between the armed forces and civilian life and assistance to the United Nations was no question of mere charity, but of sheer justice.

"Those who have suffered little, must give to those who have suffered much," Willett emphasized.

Chaplain Promotions

President Roosevelt yesterday sent to the Senate nominations for promotion of two Army chaplains from the rank of lieutenant colonel to colonel. They are Frank Meredith Thompson, Baltimore, and Alfred Cookman Oliver of 1220 Floral ave. nw.

Five Injured In Traffic Accidents

Five persons were injured in city traffic accidents yesterday.

Three were hurt as the result of a freak mishap at 14th and U sts. nw., where a streetcar, southbound or 14th st. for the Bureau of Engraving, jumped a switch, swung onto the eastbound track on U st., struck a policeman who was directing traffic, and crashed into the back of another street car.

The policeman, Pvt. Heustis H. Smith, Negro, 30, of 1711 Euclid st. nw., was taken to the Police Clinic for X-ray examination after treatment for cuts and bruises at Freedmen's Hospital.

Others injured were Walter T. Newton, 38, motorman of 716 Farragut st. nw., and a passenger, Mrs. Margaret U. Miller, 48, of 328 Madison st. nw. Newton was treated for minor cuts and bruises, and Mrs. Miller was treated at home by a private physician, police reported.

Miss Loretta Kelly, 66, of 2526 17th st. nw. was under observation at Providence Hospital last night for head and back injuries suffered when she was struck by an auto while standing on a streetcar loading platform at 7th and Independence ave. sw., at 7:30 a. m. Police said the auto was driven by Udell Barnes, 29, of 614 Evarts st. ne.

Eloise Floyd, 21, of 1916 North Vermont st., Arlington, was treated at Sibley Hospital at 1:30 a. m. for a chin cut suffered when a car in which she was riding, driven by Richard B. Fisher, 19, of 709 North Edisto st., Alexandria, collided with another auto at Rhode Island ave. and Florida ave. nw., police reported. The other car, according to police, was driven by Raybond C. Bohleber, 32, of 3102 Kelliher rd., Hyattsville, Md.

2 Restauranteurs, Baker Penalized Under Health Code

Joe Pappas, proprietor of a restaurant at 1809 L st. nw., was fined $50 by Judge Thomas D. Quinn in Municipal Court when he was found guilty of having a dirty sterilizer, dishwashing machine, walls and floors.

Max Dorsh, baker at 730 11th st. se., was fined $25 for having no soap or towels at a wash basin, flies, dirty bread and cake racks.

Stephen Karas, described in the warrant as operator of a restaurant at 1819 14th st. nw., forefeited $50 collateral on charges of allowing a cat to lie on a shelf, having roaches in a bread box, a greasy and dirty stove, exhaust fans and ducts, and dirty floors and toilets.

D. C. Army Units to Participate In Fire-Prevention Observance

All Army units in the Military District of Washington will participate in observance of Fire Prevention Week, which begins tomorrow and lasts until October 9, military district headquarters announced yesterday.

A special inspection will be made of all Army buildings and special educational programs stressing measures of fire prevention are planned.

Emphasis will be placed on care in handling cigarettes and other smoking materials. It is common Army practice to break smoked cigarettes, scattering the ashes and residual tobacco and wrapping the remaining paper into a ball for discard.

Committee to Meet

Members of a civilian executive committee in charge of the Washington campaign to recruit 350 WACS before December 7, will meet Monday. Assembling at WAC recruiting headquarters at 1400 Pennsylvania ave. nw., the committee will be taken to the Fort Myer WAC headquarters for an Army mess luncheon, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. James Clement Dunn, chairman.

Catholic Unit May Back Baby Bill

Charities Board Due to Support Plan if 'Secrecy' Clause Is Stricken

The "baby broker" bill to regulate the placement of children for adoption was given added impetus yesterday with the revelation that the Board of Catholic Charities will support the bill if the clause pertaining to "secrecy" of records is stricken.

This was indicated in a letter sent by the Right Rev. Msgr. Lawrence J. Shehan, director of the Board of Catholic Charities, to the Senate District Committee, which has the bill on its agenda.

Quick Action Seen

At the same time, it was learned that the Board of Public Welfare, chief sponsor of the bill, has notified the committee of its agreement to the deletion of the offending clause.

The clause provides that no individual or agency be given access to records or case histories without the approval of the Board of Public Welfare. The clause also, in effect, gives the board the right of examining the records of any of the charitable and child placement agencies falling within the scope of the bill.

Reliable sources declared that the Senate Committee would, in all probability, remove the controversial provision, thus paving the way for quick action on the floor.

Further Support

Latest in a long list of civic and charitable organizations to offer support to the bill is the foster care service of the Board of Public Welfare.

Miss Patricia Morss, chief of the service, yesterday issued a statement which said in part:

"Because the District has not had legislation regulating the placement of children for adoption, we feel that in many cases the identity of the children has been lost and that in many cases they were not placed in competent hands. The baby broker bill offers much needed protection for such youngsters."

District Native Reported Wounded In Sicilian Action

Sergt. Spencer W. Burger, 27, son of Mrs. Hattie B. Burger, 434 Ethan Allen ave., Takoma Park, Md., has been wounded in action, the War Department announced yesterday.

A recent letter to his mother reveals that he was shot twice in the leg and in the heel and right shoulder on August 11 while engaging in the battle for Sicily.

Sergeant Burger participated in the original invasion of Africa last November and fought at Casablanca and in Tunisia. A native of the District, where he attended school, Burger enlisted in the Army September 16, 1939, at Burbank, Calif., and was trained at Fort Ord, Calif., and Fort Lewis, Wash.

City News In Brief

Funds totaling $8101.64 yesterday were granted to the Child Care and Protection Committee, D. C. Civilian War Services Division, by the Community War Fund.

The new grant makes possible the continuance of services of three staff members and four case workers and covers the cost of operation of the counseling and foster day care section of the Services for Children of Working Mothers for the next four months.

Much of the work of the section has been devoted to finding foster homes for children under 2 years of age, for whom regular centers have not been provided, and for children who live an inconvenient distance from group centers. Foster homes have been found for 200 children, but requests for placement now total more than 800.

Service Flag Blessed

The service flag of Gonzaga High School, honoring 611 alumni now in the armed forces, was solemnly blessed and dedicated yesterday at ceremonies in St. Aloysius' Church, North Capitol and I sts. nw.

Two Gonzaga alumni presented the emblem to Father Henri J. Wiesel, S.J., president of Gonzaga, at the entrance to the sanctuary. They were Lieut. Comdr. Edward P. McLarney of the Navy Medical Corps, and Lieut. Frank Fenwick of the Army Air Forces, both of whom have seen active combat.

Diner Fined $10

When he was brought before Judge Thomas Quinn in Municipal Court yesterday on a disorderly conduct charge, Fletcher Hill, 42, Negro, of 1535 P st. nw., explained he had been sitting in a restaurant eating a $1.50 chicken dinner when he decided to go to the bar for a beer. On his return the chicken was gone and he called police, who said his language was foul. Judge Quinn fined Hill $10.

In Grand Rapids

Msgr. Haas Is Elevated To Bishop

The Right Rev. Msgr. Francis J. Haas, chairman of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices, has been named Bishop of Grand Rapids, Mich., Archbishop Amleto Giovanni Cicoganni, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, announced early today.

Bishop-elect Haas, who is dean of the School of Social Sciences at Catholic University, is widely known throughout the country for his activities in labor relations, and it has been estimated that he participated in the settlement of more than 1500 strikes. He was one of the members of the original National Labor Relations Board, and has been a special conciliator for the Department of Labor since 1935.

A native of Racine, Wis., the 54-year-old prelate was ordained there in 1913, after studying at St. Francis Seminary, St. Francis, Wis. Later he joined the faculty at St. Francis, leaving there to take postgraduate courses at Johns Hopkins and Catholic University, and subsequently to become a teacher at the latter.

From 1931 to 1935, he was director of the National Catholic School of Social Sciences here, relinquishing this post to return to St. Francis as rector. After two years, he came back here again, this time as rector of the Catholic University's School of Social Sciences.

He is a past president of the Catholic Association for International Peace and has been active for years in the Catholic Conference on Industrial Problems.

Clubs Offer Parties for Servicemen

A new USO club for women in the armed services will be opened at 1911 H st. nw. tonight with a military ball instead of last night as incorrectly stated in yesterday's Post. The ball will be held at 8:30 p. m. and formal dedication ceremonies will be presided over by Sidney F. Taliaferro, chairman of the local USO council.

Foundry Methodist Church will celebrate the third anniversary of Saturday night dinners for servicemen with a special birthday party dinner to be held in the Letts building at 16th and N sts. nw. at 6:30 o'clock tonight. 5 Boys Held In Looting of Mail Boxes

Social Security Cards Used in Cashing Checks In D. C. Stores

Five teen-age youths who have been looting Washington apartment house mail boxes since last June and forging indorsements on the Government and commercial checks they found, were being held at the Receiving Home last night after their arrest by U.S. Secret Service agents.

The youths, all Negroes, had managed to cash the checks by obtaining Social Security cards in the name of the payee of each of the checks they stole, Frank J. Wilson, chief of Secret Service, said. The largest of the checks was for $114, he said.

Wilson pointed to the case as an object lesson in a Nation-wide "Know Your Endorser" campaign the Secret Service has been conducting among merchants.

"Anyone can get a Social Security card in somebody else's name in just a few minutes," he said. "Social Security cards are by no means reliable identification."

Two youths, two of them Department of Commerce messengers and a third a former Department of Commerce messenger who resigned to enlist in the Army Reserves, cashed the checks by making small purchases and receiving change.

All the youths are 17 except one who is 15, cashed the checks at five downtown business places. The merchants stand to lose the amount of each check they cashed, the Secret Service said.

Most of the apartment houses at which mail boxes were looted are in the 1400 block of R st. nw., and the 2500 block of 17th st. nw. Another was in the 1700 block of P st. nw.

Mail which did not include checks were burned in the back yard of one of the thiefs, the Secret Service said.

Contained in some of the mail destroyed were Government bonds and at least one Army allotment check which had been mailed to the dependents of a man in service.

U. S. Postal authorities have been notified of the thefts and may take action in addition to that instituted by the Secret Service.

Confessions have been obtained from each of the youths and they have been turned over to a Juvenile Court probation officer for further investigation pending the filing of charges.

Joseph H. McCann Funeral Services Set for Monday

Funeral services for Joseph H. McCann, 46, patent attorney, will be held Monday at 9 a. m. at the home of his mother, Mrs. Mary A. McCann, 4714 15th st. nw. Mr. McCann died Thursday at Emergency Hospital after a brief illness.

A native of Washington, Mr. McCann was graduated from the Georgetown School of Law in 1924, and was associated with the firm of Cameron, Kerkam & Sutton. He served in the Navy during the First World War and was a member of the American Legion.

Hyde Park Mementoes Go on Display

MARINE MILESTONE—In the picture at the top Seaman Arthur Galley looks at a model of the "Constitution"—the famous "Old Ironsides." Below, model of the submarine built in 1776 in a vain effort to blow up the British "Eagle" in New York Harbor

Bejeweled gifts from the Sultan of Morocco, a painting by British Prime Minister Winston Churchill and a hand-carved model of the United States frigate Constitution (Old Ironsides), are among a wealth of material of artistic and historical interest from the Hyde Park library of President Roosevelt now on display at the National Archives.

The Sultan's gifts are a curved knife, known as a yataghan, in a jewel-studded sheath, and gold-filigreed bracelets and a gold tiara for Mrs. Roosevelt.

Churchill's oil painting depicts Marrakech, Morocco. It was done in 1929 and presented to the President shortly after the Casablanca conference in January, 1943.

An annotated map of Sicily sent to Mr. Roosevelt by Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., while the campaign was still in progress attracted much interest at yesterday's preview.

Other especially interesting items include Roosevelt family papers, family photographs, naval sketches of the war with Mexico, stamp collection, Tibetan tapestries, copy of the Atlantic Charter, and a model of a submarine built by David Bushnell during the American revolution. The sub was designed to bore a hole in the British ship Eagle, insert an explosive charge and then move away. The experiment failed when the boring machine proved ineffective against the copper sheathing in the Eagle's hull.

Members of Congress, the Diplomatic Corps, Supreme Court Justices, Cabinet members and other Government officials inspected the display at a special preview last night.

The exhibition will be open to the public 8:45 a. m. to 5:15 p. m. on weekdays and 1:30 to 5 p. m. on Sundays starting today and lasting until November 15.

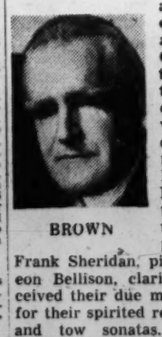
Spirited Readings Presented At 6th Concert in Brahms Cycle

By Ray C. B. Brown

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress presents on Friday night the sixth in a series of eight concerts devoted to the instrumental chamber music of Johannes Brahms. Artists: Frank Sheridan, piano; Simeon Bellison, clarinet; Naoum Benditzki, violoncello. Program: Sonata in E flat major for piano and clarinet, Op. 120, No 2: Sonata in F major for piano and violoncello, Op. 99; Trio in A minor for piano, clarinet and violoncello, Op. 114.

Interest in the Brahms cycle at the Library of Congress continued unabated last evening when Coolidge Auditorium held another attentive and enthusiastic audience. The Coolidge Quartet, mainstay of the series of eight concerts, was represented by only one member, Naoum Benditzki, violoncellist, while the other participants in the program were Frank Sheridan, pianist, and Simeon Bellison, clarinetist, who received their due meed of applause for their spirited readings of a trio and tow sonatas. Without discounting the merits of his two associates, one can say the concert was another demonstration of Frank Sheridan's eminence as an ensemble player.



BROWN

The three compositions performed mirrored Brahms at the ages of 53, 58 and 61. To take them in their chronological order, the violoncello sonata in F major was written during his first long stay, from May to October 1886, at Thun in the canton of Berne, Switzerland, and the music has a pastoral quality befitting the surroundings. There he rented the entire first floor of a house with green shutters overlooking the Aar valley, and while mentally composing paced the large veranda and his suite of rooms. Other works produced that summer were the "Thun" violin sonata and the C minor piano trio.

The clarinet trio, written during a summer holiday at Ischl in 1891, was the direct result of his having heard Richard Muehlfeld play in Meiningen. With that virtuoso in mind, he decided to concentrate his attention on the clarinet as a lyric instrument, with the happy result of the trio and the clarinet quintet. The two clarinet sonatas, also composed at Ischl, did not come until three years later.

Navy Reveals Plan to Avoid Flash Burns

Treatment of Such Cases Displayed Here Before 15th Scientific Assembly

By Adele Bernstein
Post Staff Writer

The flash-burn victim—accounting for great numbers of casualties in naval battles and ground engagements where bombs and torpedoes explode—may soon be a thing of the past.

In its exhibit at the 15th Scientific Assembly in the Mayflower Hotel, the Naval Medical Center of Bethesda, Md., demonstrates some of the newest experiments in preventing flash burns.

But, experimental though these methods are, they will shortly be superseded by a radically new technique developed at the Naval Research Institute in Bethesda. Announcement of this dramatic advance in scientific achievement—with far-reaching significance for saving of civilian lives—will come tomorrow, when the U. S. Navy will describe a method of preventing burns never before employed.

Blastproof Suits

The only fairly certain method of burn prevention developed so far is the "blastproof suit.". Experimented with in World War I, when the mortality rate from bomb and torpedo explosions was high, the suit has been improved recently and can supply effective, if cumbersome, protection against the injury. Current tests, however, clearly indicated the need for a more reliable preventive. That is what the Navy has found.

Speaking last night Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., Republican House leader, of Massachusetts, charged that "for some years, a small but powerful group in this country has endeavored to undermine American institutions, American ideals, and our way of American life." Martin said "their purpose is to tear down our form of Government and to substitue some brand of state socialism."

Answering Dr. J. Heng Liu, former Minister of Public Health in China, who addressed a luncheon meeting of the society at the George Washington University, earlier in the day, where he told of "an attempt at state medicine" in China, Martin said:

"You doctors have been able to increase materially the life span of the average man and woman. This you have been able to accomplish because your profession has been free. It has been free to dare—to progress. You have the assurance of great personal satisfaction in rendering indispensable service to your fellow man."

Dr. Liu told the luncheon that "the picture of our ally, China, remains bleak. Less than 10,000 properly trained Chinese doctors must care for a country of 4 hundred million persons."

Early yesterday, uniformed and civilian doctors, nurses and surgeons attending the assembly, heard Col. Roy D. Halloran of the Army Medical Corps declare that the hazards of enemy psychological warfare have necessitated the rejection of about one-third of American draftees. These men are basically unsuited to the rigors of warfare, though not at all necessarily psychotic, he pointed out. The Army must, however, weed out men who will crack under the strain of enemy-inspired rumor, fire, or "just being away from home and familiar surroundings."

Here in Washington, numerous Government employes with advanced tubercular conditions have been passed by Civil Service without X-ray examinations, the exhibit of the D. C. Tuberculosis Association and Bureau at the Scientific Assembly reveals. The plea is for regular examination, not only for Federal workers, but for all civilians, as a preventive measure.

Major Griffith's Funeral Services Will Be Held Today

Military services will be held today at 11 a. m. in Arlington Cemetery for Maj. Charles Thorpe Griffith, 61, retired Army officer, who died Tuesday at Philadelphia.

Major Griffith was the brother of Mrs. John Russell Young, wife of the District Commissioner. He was born in Baltimore and moved to Washington with his parents at the age of 12. He served in the Philippine and Vera Cruz campaigns.

During the World War he was a major in the Field Artillery. In 1919 Major Griffith retired for disability received in line of duty and shortly thereafter was appointed professor of military science and tactics at the University of Pennsylvania, a post he held for two years.

Besides Mrs. Young he is survived by his widow, the former Caroline Tiers of Philadelphia, whom he married in 1911, and another sister, Mrs. Frank T. Gorman, wife of Rear Admiral Gorman of the Coast Guard.

THE GENTLER SEX

'Do Come Again!'

(How to be a popular house guest in wartime.)

Be definite enough about your time of arrival to let your hostess know for what meal to expect you, but not definite enough to make her feel she should brave traffic to come to the station to meet you.

Bring with you all your ration stamps, a generous supply of soap and cleansing tissues, some paper towels (remember she may have to launder the hand embroidered guest towels herself if you soil them) and an extra electric light bulb for the guestroom reading lamp. (It will probably be without a bulb owing to the shortage, and it would be embarrassing to the hostess to learn you had discovered this.)

Bring practical gifts for all members of the family: A steak, razor blades or shorts with elastic for the host; some washing powder, bobby pins, or rubber gloves for the hostess; nlyon stockings for the maid (if any), defense stamps, or better still, war bonds for the kiddies.

Bring plenty of warm clothing, sweaters, snuggies, red flannel union suits, fascinators, shawls, mittens, ear muffs, overshoes, and a sleeping bag so your hostess will not feel apologetic for the lack of household heat—and also that you will not catch your death of cold. Unless you want to sleep with all your clothing piled on you, bring along an extra blanket. (The hostess will tell you to let her know if you need more cover but it would be best not to take that advice literally.)

Bring a large and commodious cook apron—you probably will need it.

Wear your heaviest walking shoes—or else bring a bicycle or some roller skates so as to be prepared to make proper demur when your hostess says, "I-er think we may possibly have gasoline enough to ride over to the Swaggs."

Announce on your arrival that you have become a vegetarian, that your doctor has forbidden you to eat any sweets, and that your favorite dishes are soy beans and macaroni.

Have a wide repertoire of parlor (and kitchen) tricks. Be a handy man able to fix anything from a musical powder box to a furnace. Be an expert chain store marketer, an artistic yard man, a plain or fancy cook and an expert presser and cleaner. Be able to perform with finesse on a washing machine (or a washboard), an electric iron, a carpet sweeper, a broom, and a dishpan, and always graciously accede to requests for encores.

Discover your host's favorite radio commentator and insist on listening to him while keeping your own opinions to yourself.

Study up in advance on war strategy, military government, peace plans, tax proposals, back yard gardens, the 1944 political outlook, the World Series outlook, and all other possible outlooks in order to be an intelligent (though not opinionated) listener to your host's dissertations.

Let your hostess know at what hour, minute or second you expect to depart and be sure to make your train reservation early enough so that she won't be nervous about your getting it. However, it's more than likely that you'll have to cancel it (if you follow the foregoing instructions) because your host and hostess will make you such an attractive offer to stay on.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

There are a lot of exercises you can skip to advantage. Bending straight over to touch your toes is one of them. Often that is a sheer triumph of will power over avoirdupois, but it doesn't do much for you.

You can sit down on the floor and get much more out of your bending, provided you give it a stretch and the right twist. Try this one on your rampant waistline: Sit on floor, legs straight out and wide apart, arms straight out at sides in line with the shoulders. First, pull yourself slim through the middle, then twist sharply at the waist, bend forward at the hips, and touch left fingers to right toes. Start over and bend to the other side. Now you've got something.

Stay as you are, but stretch arms overhead—without hunching the shoulders—and pull slim through the middle. Twist to the side and bend to touch both hands to outstretched right foot. Sit up, stretch, and bend to left. In both exercises, keep pulling slim through the middle as you twist and bend. That isn't easy, but it is easier to do these exercises right then to stand up and bend correctly. Six counts will do for each at the beginning.

Another exercise you can toss out of your program is the one in which you lie on your back on the floor and raise your legs, knees straight. That is supposed to be very streamlining for your muscular girdle. But for the first 8 or 10 inches, the muscles of the lower back are the ones that do most of the work. You will avoid strain and get better results by starting with feet elevated 8 to 10 inches, then raising legs, knees straight, to right angles with the trunk. Try this with one leg at a time, then with both. Another good exercise from that position is to fling one arm up on the floor overhead as you bring the leg on the same side to right angle. That increases the stretch through the waist. Alternate sides and repeat 10 counts. In each exercise, try to remember to keep the small of the back pressed down against the floor.

Not everybody can bend right over and touch her toes. But it's no prize exercise. Side-bending, as illustrated by Helen O'Connell, the lark with Bobby Dorsey's Orchestra, is much more effective in slimming you down. Read "Keep in Trim" today for the lowdown on some of your pet exercises.

An exercise most women should avoid is backward bending. It's all right for anyone with a very strong back, but, in general, it is apt to increase the tendency to swayback. You can't go wrong on the stretching, twisting and sideward bending already described. But if you want a backward bend in your set, do this: Lie fact downward on a good solid table or flat-topped desk, with legs straight down and feet on floor so that trunk and hips form a right angle. Stretch arms straight out at sides on table in line with shoulders. Now, slowly raise arms, trunk and head up and back, hold, lower. That does things for your posture and firms your abdominal girdle without letting your back sway in.

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

Getting down to brass tacks in the war effort, Pi Beta Phi Fraternity not only has approved the granting of scholarships for the study of Physical Therapy but has put up the cash for 10 scholarships of $400 each. These are available to qualified college women between the ages of 20 and 37. The amount of the scholarship is to be used as the beneficiary sees fit, either as tuition, living expenses or as both.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

The need of a great number of Physical Therapists especially by the Army prompted the Pi Phis to establish the scholarship fund. All members of the active chapters as well as alumnae groups are being asked to give $1 each to supplement the initial $4000 fund.

Applicants will be recommended by the Pi Beta Phi War Service Committee chairman, by the deans of women, or by other persons in positions to speak authoritatively of applicants. Required qualifications in addition to the age limit include: two years of college work including at least one year of biology; ability to pass the physical examination; minimum height, 5 feet 2 inches.

Miss Marion McCoy, chairman of the committee for the local Pi Phi Alumnae Club, pointed out that the need for physical therapy aides in the postwar world probably will open many permanent jobs in that field. Miss Maxine Girts is president of the Washington Alumnae group.

These Women!

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Most children, at some time or another, exhibit signs of temper. Mothers think they begin to see evidences of this even in the tiny baby, who when his free movements are inhibited can cry and wave his arms furiously and look exceedingly mad.

When the child gets old enough to have desires of his own, he can't be put upon without resisting with every ounce of his strength. When mother tries to stuff him into his highchair he can kick and stiffen out like a board. Perhaps mother wants to get the morning mail and he follows her out and won't come back in again. Grandma comes to visit and he must go back home with her. The bath doesn't intrigue him nor the bed at nap time. He meets all of these situations with screams and kicks.

Well, what shall one do about it? Punish a child for resisting? Punish him for having a temper? I don't think so. It's a pretty good evidence of intelligence when a child resents being imposed upon. It's a real matter for worry when a child can be pushed around and shows no emotion about it.

For in all the above cases the parent is imposing her will above that of the child's desires. Sometimes it is necessary and then one simply has to ignore the child's temper. He has to sit down to eat, he has to come in the house, he can't always follow Grandma and baths and bedtimes may be unpleasant.

But, parents have to take account of their own behavior when the child is flaring into tantrums too frequently. Because a parent always thinks she is right, she can get too domineering and too easily ignore the child's resistance. She can become too demanding — even pleasantly so—and must always be obeyed, so that, however mild and calm, she also can be infuriating.

Temper tantrums are indicative of one of two things. The child may find them the only way to get to express himself and it is up to the parent to give in and see that he has legitimate outlets for his own desires. Or, he has an indulgent parent who resists only until the child gets tough and tempery and then gives in. Such temper tantrums are opportunistic and can be ignored. The kind that come from righteous indignation and being dominated are real signs of trouble. In this case it is the parent, quite as much as the child, who is stubborn.

Vitamin Studies on Graying Hair Leave Unsolved Problems

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

IN SPITE of some over-enthusiastic announcements of experiments with vitamin products, the problems of premature graying of hair and its treatment are still unsolved. There are many eccentricities about its development that are hard to explain. For instance, I have in mind a man who at the age of 29 began to get gray hair and at the same time developed pigmented spots on the eyelids and neck and arms—pigment loss one place, pigment increase another. Some have graying only of the eyebrows, the hair on the head and elsewhere on the body remaining in its original condition.

The vitamin studies on prematurely graying hair have been made only on a few animals—rats, dogs and silver foxes. Other animals, including man, are resistant. By shaking a watery solution of liver extract, yeast, or rice bran with fuller's earth, several vitamin B factors (thiamine, riboflavin, pyrioxine) are removed, leaving a solution of the "filtrate factor."

Animals fed with a diet containing other vitamins but lacking this filtrate factor show patches of fur that has become gray and thinned, and the skin becomes thin and wrinkled as in old age. On adding the filtrate factor, these symptoms clear up in most cases.

The filtrate factor is known to contain pantothenic acid and para-amino-benzoic acid. But attempts to determine which of these is responsible for the prevention of graying hair have not been successful. Some experimenters report that removing pantothenic acid causes premature graying and restoring it to the diet causes return of pigment; others report the same effects with para-amino-benzoic acid. There is possibly another factor or factors yet undiscovered in the filtrate factor."

Little work has been reported on human beings. One dermatologist, giving large amounts of B complex fortified with para-amino-benzonic acid, reported that in 800 patients with premature graying within three to eight weeks the hair became yellowish and then dark gray.

But others have tried it with no noticeable results. It depends a great deal on the personal equation. It has been shown that it is very easy to deceive even the most conscientious judges on the color of hair or skin, especially the slight changes which would be denoted in changing from "gray" to "dark, dusty gray."

In the latest report by Dr. Brandeleone and colleagues 19 patients were studied by photographs and clipping of specimens before and after giving the filtrate factor and in only two cases was there any change at all.

Besides it again goes to show that animal experiments with vitamins and endocrine products cannot be translated over to human beings. Some animals are very susceptible to vitamin deficiency—for instance, rats that have for generations been scavengers and used to a very varied diet. Rabbits and guinea pigs on the contrary, used to a monotonous and not very nutritious diet, do not respond to vitamin experiments at all quickly.

MAKE IT DO . . .

Blanket Story

By Martha Ellyn

Fifty million blankets! That's a lot of blankets. And yet that is the number the U. S. Quartermaster has contracted for the Army, Navy and Marine Corps in the last four years. In fact, ten million blankets are to be manufactured for the Quartermaster and delivered between June and December of this year.

It wouldn't seem there would be any blankets left for civilian use. But when you go into the department stores you see an imposing array of them, lovely and dependable in color, texture and quality.

The long arm of the Office of Price Administration reached out to place ceiling prices on blankets. In March, 1942, a ban was placed on the manufacture of all-wool blankets by WP . But that restriction has been lifted and so now you may buy all-wool blankets as well as the following: all-cotton; wool-cotton; wool-rayon-cotton; wool-rayon.

If you can't get just the kin that you have used in peac times, just pause and conside that any limitations which have been placed on the manufacture of blankets are so that an adequate supply can keep our armed forces warm. Service blankets are 100% wool and average almost four pounds in weight.

Anyone can readily see wh there are restrictions on size an colors of blankets. This als means that you must buy blankets wisely, clean them with grea care and store them with every precaution for their safety.

Function should be considered when you go out to buy a blanket. Is the blanket to be used in a mild or a bitter-cold climate? Washington is not one of the frigid climates. Some persons do not require as warm a blanket as others. The temperature of some houses does not require as warm blanket as others.

Warmth and durability, without too much weight, are the first considerations. Of course, you will want to know how to judge a blanket for quality and performance. Look at the label attached to the blanket, it will tell the story. Then if you do not have adequate information ask the buyer in the blanket department to tell you what else you want to know.

You can't buy any color of blanket you want any more, ranging in shades from sky-blue pink to lime-green. A Government order has limited the number of colors of any one style to no more than four, and white. While the colors of the various manufacturers differ, yet most of them run to rose, blue, green and cedar.

Let's consider the various points to be considered when buying blankets:

SIZE—Blankets should be long enough to tuck in at the foot of the bed and wide enough to hang over the sides of the mattress. However, the size has been restricted by the Government to no longer than 84 inches and no more than 72 inches wide.

WARMTH — One hundred points is the average rating for a 3½-pound all-wool blanket. Thermal transmission tests the amount of body heat that escapes through the fabric.

COLOR FASTNESS TO WASHING — All blankets "bleed" slightly in color when washed, so should always be washed separately. A rating as to the color fastness often appears on the label on the blanket, such as "fair," "good," or "excellent."

SHRINKAGE—Although the shrinkage in washing or drying of blankets depends upon whether proper care is taken in the cleaning process, yet it should not exceed 10 per cent in width or length.

TENSILE STRENGTH—This measures the durability. The higher the tensile strength the longer the wear of the blanket.

After you buy your blankets, then use them with care. Don't allow them to get torn on sharp edges. Help blankets to retain their original size, fluffiness and rich color for many years. If you launder them at home, remember that wool fiber is sensitive when wet, so work quickly but gently. If your blankets go to the dry cleaners or laundry, choose one that you know gives dependable service.

The directions for washing blankets, given on the blankets pictured today, are as follows:

Use pure neutral soap in a small quantity of hot water. Fill the tub in which blankets are to be washed two-thirds full. Add borax if water is hard. Add dissolved soap to form rich soapsuds so that the suds will "stay up" while the blanket is immersed. Souse up and down, but do not rub. Squeeze out as much water as possible. Rinse in three clear waters of the same tepidity. Be sure all soap is out, then squeeze as dry as possible with the hands. Hang over a line out of direct sunlight. Use no clothespins. Stretch frequently, length and breadth, while drying. Choose a day when you know the blanket will dry quickly. If space is available, it is well to lay the blanket on a clean sheet to dry.

Mrs. Ivan C. Crawford, jr., carefully read the tag on the new blankets she has just purchased. She realizes that now more than ever there is the necessity for preserving the life of household furnishings. The tag not only tells that her 100 per cent wool blankets will give wear, warmth and satisfaction, but also that to insure longevity they should be washed carefully.

Baby Talk

By Ruth Gregory

Do you know how many babies were born in Washington, D. C., the first half of this year? We checked just for fun: 11,329! The District has more than doubled its birth rate since 1935, and a further rise is expected before the year is out.

If you're going to contribute to that "further rise," you've probably already begun to think about "tiny garments." Many a woman who never learned to use a needle, who couldn't tell the difference between the bias and the straight of a piece of cloth, has discovered via her first layette that swing isn't a very complicated process. Baby things are easy and fun to make, and even an inexperienced seamstress can turn out a dainty and adorable wardrobe for less than half the price of ready-made garments.

Last week we mentioned the opening of a new fabric section in one of the F st. stores, but we didn't tell about the fine stock of materials they have for the new baby's wardrobe. They've got fine batistes and nainsook for as little as 30 cents a yard, white and pink flanellette of very good quality for the same amount per yard, flowered wool challis (when did you see it last?) for around $2.50 a yard, cotton quilting for around $1.75. They've even got baby bunting for blankets at around 80 cents a yard.

The layette items illustrated in the photograph above were made from a Simplicity pattern. Although most of the pattern departments in town carry Simplicity, we couldn't find this particular pattern set in stock anywhere (more coming in any day). Seems like the stores have a hard time keeping up with the terrific demand for layette patterns (that "further rise" isn't just loose talk).

McCall (773) and Butterick (6103) are even more inclusive (two of the stores have good stocks of these at the moment). The Butterick layette, for instance, includes dress, kimona, nightgown, bib, sacque, slip, booties, and also embroidery transfer designs. Both of these pattern sets are about 35 cents.

Even if you're not having a baby, it wouldn't be a bad idea to whip up some swaddling clothes for a friend who is. (How many days is it till Christmas?)

Beauty Finds

War Paint:

The Apaches would have loved this little kit. So will you—if you're one of the many women who've discovered lip rouge can be more artfully applied with a brush. Here's a brush and a flat jar of fine-textured rouge neatly packed away in a purse-size black moire kit. Comes in four shades, including geranium and fuchsia. About $1.50.

Need a New Face?

You might try this new make-up base which is supposed to cover a multitude of sins wtihout giving you a mask-like face. It's light as mist and velvet-textured, and there are several shades from which to choose the one that best suits you: "Luscious" for fair skins, "Brunette" for darker complexions, "Daytime Blush" for medium-tone skins and "Evening Blush" if you like a touch of the exotic. Wear it with or without powder. About $1.50.

Dry Perfume:

"Poudre a Sachet" — that's what the French call it. And it's a fine answer to the wartime cologne shortage. You can get yourself a small bottle of this powder fragrance and use it on your body instead of cologne, or make it up into sachet bags for your lingerie (good idea for a Christmas gift). Available in the well-known scents of this particular perfumer: from the exotic "Danger" to sweet floral "Jasmine." Around $2.

Old Friends In New Packages:

The products packed into this package need no intrduction: three cakes of floral-scented soap and a cylinder of fragrant talcum. The crisp white box they come in is new—can be used as a cleansing tissue dispenser after you've removed the bath accessories. About $1.50.

Winter's Coming:

If you're like the lowly grasshopper, with no thought of the morrow, you won't be interested. But if you've remembered last winter and noted WPB's memos on the fuel situation, this new heating-pad is something. The outside is softly wrapped in a chamois-like covering, and inside there's a container that performs the heat miracle. You just add a couple of drops of hot water and the pad stays hot for hours. About $1.

SHOP AND RUN

By Marianne

Substitutes For Maid Service

Keeping up with the laundry this summer has been no fun! Gladly we pull our woolens out of the moth balls and pack away limpid whites that kept the laundry bag well fed.

We'll take winter any day—at least for the duration. Especially since you can now get three preparations that cover the bulk of winter laundries.

The first preparation is for washing knit woolens. It's a pine jelly that looks good enough to eat. You dissolve two tablespoons in a basin of water, toss in your woolens, and that's all the work involved. Unlike ordinary soap this jelly revitalizes the wool and assures you that the colors will remain the same. And it isn't necessary to rinse the garment out four or five times to get all the soap out. With a product like this you can wash your knit woolens at home without running the risk of seeing a size 36 shrink to a 32 after a dunking in the washbasin. Fifty cents and $1 or $2.95 for the 4 pound jar.

The second preparation is a beauty bath for your lingerie. It's not just another item to pamper your vanity and clutter up the shelves. It's grand for washing girdles and foundation garments because it will not affect the elastic in the garment and it also deordorizes. Fifty cents and $1.

The third product eases the nightly ritual of washing out hosiery now that we're back-to-stockings. This rinse was made especially for rayons, cotton and nylon hosiery. It prolongs the life of your stockings and eliminates bagginess and a "washed" look. Costs a penny per washing. Fifty cents and $1.

For shopping information call NAtional 4200 Extension 324 between 9 and 5:30.

Powder-Puffs 'n' Pistols

Those pistol-packin' mammas of the New York City police force will be able to carry their shooting irons right along with their powder puffs from now on: The Mayor of that town recently issued the first combination gun holster and make-up kits to the policewomen.

Of black cowhide, with an envelope flap, the holster bags swing from the shoulder. They're equipped with the regulation Colt .32-caliber revolver, a plastic compact and dry rouge case, lipstick and a compartment for gloves, money and handkerchief.

Victor Mature Learned About War the Hard Way

WITH VICTOR MATURE, formerly of Gertrude Lawrence's "Lady in the Dark" and the cinema—who now is a bo'sun's mate, first class, in the United States Coast Guard—the latest luminary announced to appear with Lieut. Rudy Vallee's "Lucky 'Leventh" Coast Guard Band, at the "Stars at Midnight" bond show scheduled for both the Earle and Capitol theaters Monday night at 11:45, now might be as good a time as any to get his record straight.

GLENN FORD

Prior to joining the regular reserves, he served as a member of the Temporary Reserves of the Coast Guard, doing patrol duty off the California coast in his own cruiser. He joined the regular Coast Guard service in the late summer of 1942 and was assigned to a California station for his "boot training."

In the latter part of 1942, the actor once obliquely stigmatized as "that beautiful hunk of man" shipped out first on submarine patrol in the frozen sectors off the New England coast and Eastern Canada. Later he was transferred to convoy duty on the Murmansk run, as tough an assignment as there is in the books.

His ship was directly behind the Coast Guard combat cutter Escanaba a few months ago, when she "got it" and disappeared in a matter of minutes, and picked up the only two survivors.

With his own combat service fresh in mind, it is no wonder that Darryl Zanuck, in charge of production at Twentieth Century-Fox, has notified Mature that his options are being picked up as they come along and that after the war he will resume work at the studios under the salary increases that would have accrued if he had been continuously before the cameras all that time.

In addition to Lieutenant Vallee and his band and long list of specialists and the combined stage shows currently at the Capitol and Earle, members of the cast of "The Army Play by Play," opening Monday night at the National, also will be on the "Stars at Midnight" bill, together with other outstanding theatrical personalities appearing in Washington next week. The only means of gaining admission to either house is the purchase of a war bond of $25, $50 or $100 denomination.

If You Need a Reminder

Everybody must know by now that Paramount's Technicolor picturization of Ernest Hemingway's "For Whom the Bell Tolls" is entering its third week at the Palace, with Gary Cooper, Ingrid Bergman, Katina Paxinou and Akim Tamiroff heading a distinguished cast. It is no more a secret that "Thank Your Lucky Stars," the rollicking, all-star musical, is romping into its second week at the Earle and that "Behind the Rising Sun" is doing the same at RKO-Keith's, with Margo, Tom Neal and J. Carroll Naish in the top spots.

At the Metropolitan, "Destroyer," with Edward G. Robinson, Glenn Ford, Marguerite Chapman and Regis Toomey, is the feature and, at the Columbia, Claudette Colbert, Paulette Goddard and Veronica Lake in "So Proudly We Hail." The Little is carrying on with "Black Sea Fighters" and "My Favorite Blonde."

Consider them all favorably rereviewed and you'll about have it.

It was a fitting tribute to a quiet and unobtrusive fellow, the other night, when John J. Payette, Warner Brothers zone manager and cochairman with Carter T. Barron of the District of Columbia War Activities Committee of the motion picture industry, was made guest of honor at the Stage Door Canteen—with the Earle Theater Roxyettes serving as junior hostesses. Johnny has done a mammoth job providing entertainment for the armed services and making all the resources of his position available to the Treasury Department in bond drives, "special events" and whatever. Unless I don't know him after 25 years of close association, he will continue to do so for the duration. He may not have another 25-pound cake presented to him by Representative Clare Boothe Luce to nibble on, but what t'ell!

Action in the Offing

Our old friend Pete Dailey, of Universal Pictures, takes the trouble to mail us a recent copy of Life all cleated up to direct attention to an interesting story about Lieut. Col. Evans F. Carlson and his United States Marines Raider Battalion, Maj. James Roosevelt second in command and their exploits in demolishing Makin Island on a "blind" raid that resulted in the extinction of every Jap on the island and the destruction of all its installations.

It seems Walter Wanger is picturizing this blazing incident of the war under the title of "Gung Ho," the slogan of the outfit, meaning "All work together," or "Work in harmony." Colonel Carlson is sitting in as technical adviser on the picture, assisted by First Lieut. W. S. LeFrancois, author of the original screen story, and Gunnery Sergt. Victor Maghakian, celebrated "Transport" of the raiders. All three wear the Navy Cross for their valor on the Makin raid.

Mr. Wanger shouldn't go wrong on this one!

Comes word that Eva Tanguay, one-time top ranking vaudeville and musical comedy star, contends that the story of her life is worth $75,000. She has brought suit in that sum against Elza Schallert, magazine writer, two unidentified persons and a corporation, claiming they are withholding her manuscript and other written material suitable for a film or radio story. She petitioned the Superior Court in Los Angeles to compel return of the material or payment of $75,000 in lieu thereof. The "I Don't Care" girl is modest. Her life, while she was living it among the top-flighters, was worth a lot more than $75,000.

Born-Thirty-Years-Too-Late Note

Unless you saw Tanguay in her hey-heyday, you have never seen a dynamo in action!

Gossip From Gotham

New York, October 1.

More than 25 years ago Harry Pilcer, then a featured dancer in the "Follies," was spoken to, brusquely, by Flo Ziegfeld. Fanny Brice advised Pilcer to make a frank, direct answer. He did—and was fired. Miss Brice, contrite, staked him to a trip to Chicago, where he worked for two years. Then Pilcer went to Paris, married the famous Gaby Delys, and they became the wealthiest dance-team of their time . . . Pilcer lost his home and fortune when the Nazis came. He returned to America, broke. Fanny Brice remembered that she, indirectly, had been responsible for his going to France, and so she wired him to come to Hollywood and be her guest. He accepted this opportunity to meet the Hollywood great who might restore his fame. Pilcer has been there a year, but has met nobody. Because Fanny, a sudden devotee of the rod-and-reel, takes him fishing every single day.

FANNY BRICE

Gilbert Miller, the producer, in discussing the shortage of good actors, told of a similar shortage which befell his late father, the eminent actor-producer, Henry Miller. At that time the senior Miller was casting a show and needed an unusually talented actress. He stated his requirements to the agents: "The star I need must have the fire of Sarah Bernhardt, the spirituality of Eleanora Duse, and the charm and winsomeness of Maude Adams." . . . After a two-week search, Miller finally had to be content with an ad placed in the morning papers: "WANTED, Leading woman. White preferred."

Somewhere on the mainland of Italy, a few days ago, the ground crew of a newly constructed airport saw a strange American bomber. And out of the plane came Jack Benny, Larry Adler and Wini Shaw. The entertainers hadn't been expected, and their audience was away on business—bombing business. In due time the fliers returned from their mission, grouped themselves around a small house and watched the visitors from Broadway do their routines on the porch—the first American show on the continent of Europe since the war began . . . Jack and Wini returned to New York last week. Their Short-Snorter bills carry one unusual autograph—that of a high-ranking German officer who, as a prisoner, came back to America with them.

Arthur Garfield Hays will bring an injunction suit against the Postmaster General, to restrain him from interfering with the mailing of "Give Out," a book of songs for servicemen which was compiled with the co-operation of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps . . . Jo Davidson's bust of Madame Chiang Kai-shek now is on its way to Chungking . . . Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Dorsey dined with Bob Weitman of the Paramount. Every half hour Dorsey went to the phone, dialed a number, waited, and then hung up. "That's my house I'm calling," Dorsey explained. "The phone ringing makes my dog stay awake, so he'll be sleepy enough to let up sleep when we get home."

Ladislaus Bus-Fekete is the Hungarian playwright from whose story Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur adapted the play, "Ladies and Gentlemen," in which Helen Hayes starred. The adaptation was done at Hecht's home, and Bus-Fekete, naturally, lived there until the play was finished . . . The Hungarian told them of his native country, and of the plays he had written there. "Were any of them good?" Hecht asked . . . "I wrote a very famous play, about a circus," Bus-Fekete answered . . . "Then are you the one—is it possible—are you the one who's suing MacArthur and me?" Hecht asked . . . "Er, yes. I'm the one," confessed Bus-Fekete—the plaintiff in the plagarism suit arising out of the Hecht and MacArthur circus play, "Jumbo."

HEDDA HOPPER

Perseverance, They Say, Overcometh All Things!

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 1.—It has taken K. T. Stevens a long time, but she gets what she has wanted. She plays the leading part opposite Paul Lukas in "Address Unknown," which Billy Menzies and her father, Sam Wood, are doing for Columbia release. It's taken from one of the best short stories of the war . . . Since Laraine Day made such a hit in "Mr. Lucky," Charlie Koerner has been trying to buy half her contract from Metro. Also he has been looking for a story for her. Now he has found one—"Experiment Perilous," a play by Margaret Carpenter. He hopes that by January the picture, with Laraine in the lead, will be rolling. It's a mystery drama. Two leading men are already set—Paul Henreid and George Brent.

LORRAINE DAY

Somebody will have to give way if Brian Donlevy plays "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo" for Metro. At present he's still under Paramount suspension.

Wilkie Visits Zanucks

Wendell Willkie's been staying here with the Darryl Zanucks, holding pow-wows with important producers, directors, writers—in fact, the leaders of the industry. 'Tis said he's here to O. K. the first draft of "One World." However, he could have done that in New York. I'm wondering if he isn't mapping out his political campaign. Zanuck inaugurated something new when he had Billy Bacher, a company of 65, and an orchestra of 30 pieces record the entire script of "The Life of Woodrow Wilson." The record should save lots of money. By listening to it, you can tell which scenes become tiresome because of overlength, or select others which you'd like more of. Orson Welles tried it once, but was told the experiment was too expensive.

Diary From a Secretary

Spencer Tracy's secretary, Peggy Goff, left for England in March, under the auspices of the Red Cross. He asked if she wouldn't write him once a week. She did. It's sort of a diary, and so good he's going to have it published. Mrs. Hardy (Fay Holden) on her 50th birthday got two presents from her husband—one for Mother Hardy—50 5-day-old chicks, and for herself, a $5000 war bond. Patsy Kelly is in "Star Dust," which is under direction of the man who produced "Skin of Our Teeth." Elsie Ferguson, the beautiful, nearing 60, makes her comeback in the Theater Guild's "Beyond the Farthest Star." Then I'll bet she'll get another chance at a Hollywood career. You're too young to remember those pictures she did for Paramount.

Will She Tell All?

Nazimova, living in her old house in the rear of the Garden of Allah, is finishing her autobiography. If she tells all, it will be a humdinger. Somebody's got to write the truth about Hollywood some time. Mary Healy, who has made a hit with her mother-in-law, Grace Hayes, at the Riobamba, is wanted by Vinton Freedley for his next musical. Buddy De Sylva visited the Bing Crosbys in their new home, and remarked: "Gosh! This is pretty. Who decorated it?" Dixie said, "Rita Kaufman." Rita's now dressing sets for Buddy at Paramount.

Three sets of honeymooning stars in New York—Maria Montez mighty wistful because Pierre Aumont's sailing date is set; Tommy Dorsey—Pat Dane, Lana Turner and Steve Crane. Lana arrived with seven pieces of luggage, and waited in a taxi while her bridegroom did all the portering himself.

Round the Town

Gale Laughton, in Army uniform, kept a crowd entranced at Charles Mendl's house while making heavenly music on a harp. Elsie, who isn't musical, remarked, "It must be mighty good. I like it." I asked Arthur Rubenstein how he liked it, and he said: "The harp never interested me. It's so often out of tune. But Laughton played it so well I wasn't conscious of it." . . . Then later at Evelyn Walsh McLean's and Elsa Maxwell's party, Roz Russell, Janet Gaynor, Constance Moore, Jean Feldman, Eddie Goetz, Gary Cooper, Reggie Gardiner, Harry Crocker, Jean Gabin, (looking completely bewildered) put on an old-fashioned Virginia reel. If the old-timers had seen it they'd have been in hysterics. The two who really knew how to do a reel were Maxwell and Harry Crocker. When it was finished Roz Russell and Comdr. Bob Montgomery swapped whoppers about their youngsters, Roz boasting that her 4-month-old son is ready to walk, and to prove it, she whipped out a picture of the little fellow standing up.

Gary Cooper mighty anxious to go overseas. Says he, "I'm not

Dr. Luvia Williard, Founder Of AWHR Corps, Visits Here

Organized Group During World War 1, and Served in Combat Areas of Europe and Near East

An interesting Capital visitor for the weekend is Dr. Luvia Williard, founder and director of the American Women's Hospital Reserve Corps, who, with her aide, Maj. Edna M. Blake, and Maj. Rosalind Cowan, director of Manhattan unit, is making her first inspection of the Washington unit of the corps.

Dr. Williard, now holding the rank of colonel in the organization, was one of 1200 American women and surgeons who in World War I formed American Women's Hospitals, volunteered for overseas duty and, financing their own operations, served with valor and with distinction in the combat areas of Europe, the Balkans, Poland and the Near East. The medical group worked in cooperation with the Near Eastern Relief, the Committee for Devastated France and the Red Cross. Its personnel was present on the docks at Smyrna, Turkey, when 300,000 Christians walked the plank into exile. They accompanied the stricken horde bent with the burden of all their worldly goods on their backs into Greece and there fought the desperate battle of famine and epidemic disease until life for the evacuees was restored to some semblance of normalcy.

Hospital in Ancient Chateau

France has reason to remember American Women's Hospital No. 1, housed in an ancient chateau in the village of Neufmoutiers, Seine-et-Marne, one of many such medical centers established throughout the republic to serve both civilian and military and from whence dispensaries, clinics and relief stations manned by the American women of medicine radiated through far areas in the countryside. This hospital eventually was taken over by the Fifth French Army. A part of the staff remained, others followed our troops to various fighting fronts. Many of these noble women are still in the service while others, retired, are directing efforts of another generation in missions of mercy for World War II. In the latter half of 1941, 13 American Women's Hospital physicians were contracted for by the British Emergency Medical Service and were trnasported to England in British ships for duty in that country.

Two of the original thirteen, Dr. Barbara B. Stimson, a relative of Secretary of War Stimson, and Dr. Aelsa Bean later were transferred to the Royal Army Medical Corps where, at last report, Dr. Stimson is serving with the rank of major. Others of the group have joined the U. S. Army Medical Corps.

Dr. Williard will address the corps at headquarters, 1605 Connecticut ave., Saturday, at 4 p. m., at which time she will commission several officers and confer ribbons of merit for outstanding service. After the ceremonies, enrollment of new members will be in order. The corps has no age limitations and all women interested in the service are invited to vist headquarters or telephone ADams 7043 between 10 a. m. and 1 p. m.

Sergt Byron to Be a Hostess

Senior hostesses for Saturday's inspection are Capt. Dorothy Lee Ward, director of Washington Unit; Lieuts. Louise Atwill and Jane Dixon Wells, Sergt. Catherine Edgar Byron, Mrs. Conger N. Pratt, Mrs. Clark H. Woodward, Mrs. E. Mitchell Palmer, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Mrs. William Borah, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Mrs. Tom Connally, Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Harold Walker, Mrs. Irene Caldwell, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Walter Krueger, jr., Mrs. Clarence N. Goodwin, Mrs. Ward Olson, Mrs. Junior Owens, Mrs. William Stanley, Mrs. Charles H. McEnerney, Mrs. Marsden Perry, Mrs. Preston Marshall, Mrs. Robert Henderson, Mrs. Stanley J. O'Conner, Mrs. Edward R. Stitt, Mrs. Leo Brison Norris, Mrs. William Moffett, Mrs. Frank Waldrop, Miss Ruth Mitchell, Mme. Vladimir Rybar. Junior hostesses are Mrs. John Boyd Stanley, Mrs. Royce Powell, Miss Corinne Phelps, Miss Lee Murphy, Miss Natalie Phillips, Robert Guggenheim, Miss Morris Cafritz, D. A. Hanes, Miss Lula M. Young, Oliver W. Hammonds, and Roy St. Louis.

Quinns Guests of Guggenheims Here

Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim have had as their house guests for the last several days Capt. and Mrs. Edward V. Quinn of New York and Palm Beach, Fla. Several parties have been given for the couple, who have many friends in Washington, where Captain Quinn is remembered especially for the fine horses he has exhibited in the horse shows in this vicinity.

Before the war took him into the service, where he is serving with the Civil Air Patrol, he used to ride his Prince Charming, an outstanding hunter, in most of the shows on the Eastern seaboard. The couple will leave Washington tonight to return to New York, where they make their home at the Plaza Hotel.

Foreign Minister Of Chile Here

Joaquin Fernandez, Foreign Minister of Chile, will return to Washington today for a few days' stay after a trip to Canada. Senor Fernandez, who was here a fortnight ago, will leave on Tuesday by plane for California and from there will go to Mexico, thence to Cuba and Central America before returning to Chile.

Air Attache Takes Bride At Embassy

The Chilean Embassy was the setting for the wedding yesterday of Senorita Marta Fernandez-Lazcano and Wing Commander Teodoro Ruiz-Diez, Air Attache of the Chilean Embassy, the ceremony taking place at 4 o'clock with Monsignor Raimondi officiating.

An improvised altar of white flowers and greens, with candelabra, had been set up in the drawing room. The ceremony, simple in arrangements, was attended by members of the Chilean Embassy staff and their wives, a small group from United States Army and Navy circles, and members of the Inter-American Defense Board. A reception followed the ceremony.

The bride wore a gown of white satin made in empire period, with long sleeves and a train. Her finger-tip tulle veil and shorter face veil was held at either side with clusters of orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of white roses and Stephanotis.

In keeping with Chilean custom, the bride had for her godmother, her sister, Senora Lopez-Larrain, wife of Col. Guillermo Lopez-Larrain, Military Attache of the Chilean Embassy. She wore a gold crepe frock with touches of black at the neckline. The little flower girl was Rosemarie Ashton, daughter of Lieut. Comdr. Carlos Ashton, member of the Chilean Naval Mission. Her frock was of pink mousseline de soie made with a long full skirt. With it she wore a pink cap trimmed with matching ribbons and carried a bouquet of pink rosebuds.

The bride's godfather was her brother-in-law, Col. Guillermo Lopez-Larrain, and witnesses for her were Gen. Oscar Fuentes, head of the Chilean Military Mission, and his aide, Maj. Marcus Lopez-Larrain. Don Rodolfo Michels, Chilean Ambassador, served as godfather for the bridegroom, and Senora de Michels was his godmother. Senora de Michel's gown was black and red, the long skirt of black crepe, the blouse of red lame, made with long sleeves and a round neck. The bridegroom had as witnesses Commander Gonzalez, head of the Chilean Air Mission, and the Naval Attache of the Chilean Embassy, Capt. Immanuel Holger.

The bride and bridegroom left later in the day for Canada to spend their honeymoon. When they return they will be at home at 3700 Harrison st.

The bride is the daughter of Senor Jorge Fernandez and Senora de Fernandez of Concepcion, Chile. She has been making her home in Washington for the last two years with her brother-in-law and sister. Commander Ruiz-Diez is the son of Senora Ramoha Ruiz and the late Senor Ruiz of Santiago, Chile.

Mme. Pramoj Gives Tea for Diplomat's Wife

It was a goodby party that wasn't a goodby, but the Thursday afternoon fete given by Mme. Seni Pramoj, wife of the Thai Minister, still had an occasion.

Originally planned for Mme. Willie Georges-Picot, who was scheduled to join her diplomat husband in Algiers, the informal tea went off as planned, but had a different purpose. Mme. Georges-Picot has decided to remain in the Capital for several more months, but the date of the party coincided with the Georges-Picots tenth wedding anniversary.

Exotic, Russian-born Mme. Georges-Picot gave up her house on Twenty-second Street in anticipation of a residence in Algiers. When her plans were changed, she scurried around to find herself another domicile and, in a few days, will move into the Frederick Sterling house on Prospect st. There is some sort of poetic justice in this because Mrs. Sterling moved into Mme. Georges-Picot's home in Sofia, Bulgaria, a few years ago.

Mme. Wei, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, was among the guests, as were Mme. de Laval, wife of the Counselor of the Swedish Legation; Mrs. J. W. Ballantine, Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mrs. Bruce Smith, Mrs. Henry F. Grady, Mrs. Lorton Sims, Mrs. William A. Disque, Mrs. Barton S. Embry, Mrs. Wallace McClure, Mrs. Eldon King, and a number of others.

Mrs. Bradford Returns

Mrs. Morgan Bradford has returned from a three-week trip to the Southwest. While away she visited in Santa Fe and Albuquerque, N. Mex.; in Phoenix, Ariz., and in El Paso, Tex. She plans to spend the winter in Washington.

Lieut. Richard H. Dulany Randolph, USNR, of Grafton, Upperville, Va., who has been on duty in the Pacific area for more than 16 months, is home on leave. He arrived in Washington Tuesday night by plane from the West Coast and spent that evening with his sister, Mrs. William Beverley Mason, jr.

His father, Dr. Archibald Cary Randolph, went to Washington early Wednesday to bring the lieutenant home, and ever since the word of his arrival got around, friends and relatives have been calling continuously at the Randolph home. Stories he has to tell of his many experiences are being greatly enjoyed by all those who hear them. There will be much entertainment this week for Lieut. Randolph. Capt. Archie Cary Randolph, jr., pilot for the Eastern Air Lines, now living in Miami, Fla., is expected at his home this week to see his brother.

Lieut. T. Beatty Brown, United States Army, of Mount Airy, near Upperville, who has been at his home on leave from Seattle, Wash., for two weeks, has now returned to his post. Lieutenant and Mrs. Brown entertained some of their friends one evening just before he left at a dinner party at their home. Others entertaining in Lieutenant Brown's honor while he was here included Mr. and Mrs. Crompton Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Duffey, jr., Mrs. Luddington Patton, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fletcher and Mrs. Robert Vanderpool Clark. Mrs. Clark left her home in Virginia the past week for Fort Robinson, Nebr., where she has gone to visit her husband who is on duty there.

While on vacation, Lieutenant Brown enjoyed "cubbing" with the Middleburg Hunt. Daniel C. Sands, MFH of the Middleburg Hunt, has been enjoying that sport since the middle of September and he took all the young members of the hunt out one morning before they left for schools and colleges.

Lieut. Brown Returns to Post In Seattle

Mrs. Louise Leith of Middleburg has leased her brick house and stables to Mr. and Mrs. W. Holden White of Long Island for the duration. Mr. White has his horses here, and will move into the house as soon as Mrs. Leith leaves for Miami, where she will spend the winter with her daughter, Mrs. Archibald Cary Randolph, jr.

Mrs. Richard Whitney, of Boston, will arrive in Virginia early next week to visit her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel S. Sands at their home, Fiddler's Green, near Middleburg. Mrs. Whitney is coming here to help celebrate her son's birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. Holland Potter entertained some of their friends at dinner a few evenings ago at their home near Middleburg. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. William C. Langley, of New York, who are spending some time at their Virginia home, Greenway, near Rectortown; Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Harper, Mr. and Mrs. Milton McCoy, and Mr. and Mrs. James B. Skinner.

MRS. PAUL B. LEWIS, who before her marriage here a few days ago was Miss Anne Marie Dever, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Dever of Takoma Park.

Purely Personal

Mme. Wei, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, will entertain a few friends at tea this afternoon at the embassy, Twin Oaks.

Claude G. Bowers, United States Ambassador to Chile, who was at Essex House in New York for a few days, has returned to the Capital.

Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, who is assistant chief of the Foreign Buildings Office of the State Department, has returned to her home on Woodland Drive after four months in Latin America. While away, she supervised the decorating of the new United States Embassy in Rio de Janeiro, visited her mother in Buenos Aires and her son, Warren, who is with our embassy there.

Mrs. Eldridge Jordan has as her house guest in her Georgetown home Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt. Mrs. Roosevelt, who spent the summer in Geneseo, N. Y., with her daughter, Mrs. Reverdy Wadsworth, plans to stay in Washington until December 1. Mrs. Wadsworth has gone to Augusta, Ga., where her husband, Lieutenant Wadsworth, is stationed.

Miss Anita Cajigas will entertain at a luncheon on Wednesday in honor of Mrs. Richard Cooper.

Mrs. Jay White, widow of the former United States Consul General in Naples, Italy, has arrived in Washington and is at the Cairo Hotel, where she is visiting her mother, Mrs. T. B. Gale, who is very ill. She was joined by her daughter, Mrs. Charles B. Bradley, jr., wife of Technical Sergeant Bradley. Mrs. White formerly resided in Washington, but at present is managing her farm, White Acres, near Lapeer, Mich., in the absence of her son, Pfc. Jay White, who is stationed at Fort Lewis, Wash.

Mr. and Mrs. William W. Wheeler entertained at a buffet supper last night for their daughter, Miss Betty Wheeler, and Richard Allen Vickrey, USNR, whose wedding will take place this evening at 7 o'clock in the Metropolitan Memorial Church. The supper party preceded the wedding rehearsal.

Mr. and Mrs. Matthew B. Claussen and their daughter, Marion, have returned to their Wardman Park apartment after spending the summer in Manchester, Vt.

Lieut. (j. g.) Joseph F. Mickey and Mrs. Mickey are now making their home in Norfolk, Va., where he is on duty. Mrs. Mickey is the former Miss Elizabeth Jane Bowen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melville B. Bowen of Chicago, and Lieutenant Mickey is of Washington. Their marriage took place in July.

Lieut. and Mrs. J. R. Van Denbergh, jr., have arrived from Newport, Ark., to visit their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Van Denbergh, sr., and Mr. and Mrs. Roy J. Joroleman.

Couple to Make Home in Maryland After Honeymoon

MRS. IRA D. PORTERFIELD.

In an afternoon ceremony yesterday at the Takoma Park Baptist Church, Miss Louise Allene Jones became the bride of Ira Deward Porterfield.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Allen Jones of Takoma Park, and Mr. Porterfield is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James David Porterfield of Greenville, W. Va.

Officiating at the 4 o'clock service was the Rev. William Earl LaRue. Mr. Jones gave his daughter in marriage. She was costumed in a gown of white faille, worn with a fingertip length veil of illusion held with an ivory beaded tiara. Her bouquet was of orchids and stephanotis.

Mrs. Donald J. Fugitt, the matron of honor, wore a gold faille ensemble and carried blue delphiniums. Bridesmaids were Miss Eleanor M. Seiter, Miss Katherine Claire, Miss Kathleen Sara Shaughnessy and Miss Jean Rudelius. They wore frocks of blue faille and carried bouquets of pompoms. Lieut. Elvin V. Wickline served as best man. Ushering were the bridegroom's classmates at Officer's Candidate School, Pvts. John Bennett, John Crow, Joseph Dougherty and Donald J. Fugitt.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents in Takoma Park. After a wedding trip to Greenville, W. Va., the couple will return to make their home in Riverdale, Md.

The bride is a graduate of the University of Maryland where she was affiliated with Delta Delta Delta. Mr. Porterfield attended the universities of West Virginia and Maryland and is a member of Alpha Gamma Rho.

Fred Gilbert Weds Miss Odel In California

Capt. George A. Seitz, USN, and Mrs. Seitz, announce the marriage of Mrs. Seitz' daughter, Miss Helen Ruth Odell, to Fred Ivan Gilbert, jr., A. U. S. The ceremony took place last week at the Congregational Church in Oroville, Calif. The marriage culminated a romance that began five years ago in Honolulu and continued through the couple's student days in California where the bride attended Mills College in Oakland and the bridegroom attended the University of California and Stanford Medical School.

The bride wore a gown of white chiffon made with court train. Her full-length tulle veil was held in place with a net Juliet cap. Her shower bouquet was of orchid, gardenias and bouvardia.

Miss Jeannette Saroyan, a former classmate of the bride and niece of William Saroyan, the novelist, was maid of honor. She wore a gown of pink tulle with matching Juliet cap and carried a bouquet of roses and delphinium. The best man was Pvt. Robert R. Gilbert, brother of the bridegroom. The ushers were Robert Dennis of Berkeley, a Naval cadet, and Martin Griffin A. U. S. of Oakland. A reception followed the ceremony.

The couple will make their home in San Francisco. Capt. and Mrs. Seitz are well known in Washington and have served several tours of duty here. They are now making their home in Norfolk, Va. Colonel and Mrs. Gilbert, parents of the bridegroom are stationed in Memphis, Tenn.

Communion Sunday Tomorrow

Thousands of local Protestants tomorrow will join with brethren throughout the globe in observing World-wide Communion Sunday, as urged by the Federal Council of Churches, New York City, central body of American Protestantism.

In announcing the observance, the Federal Council said, in part:

"In these days of war when there is so much dividing men and nations, Christians must maintain an unbroken and unbreakable fellowship.

"On October 3, World-wide Communion Sunday, followers of Christ everywhere, in Army camps and Naval bases, on shipboard, in churches large and small, in the homeland and overseas will bear witness to this fellowship. The world-wide observance of the Lord's Supper will cross frontiers of race, break through barriers of prejudice, and rise above the clash of nations.

"In obedience to him who said, 'This do in remembrance of me,' all who love Christ are called to gather about their Lord's table on the first Sunday in October, 1943, and recommit themselves to the unfinished task of His Eternal Kingdom."

(See sermon column and other notes for details on the local observance.)

Dr. Cobb Speaks Here Tomorrow

Dr. Stanwood Cobb, editor, author, lecturer, educator, well and favorably known nationally and internationally, will speak at the Baha'i Hall, 1308 I st. nw., tomorrow at 8:15 p. m. on "Power of Prayer." Dr. Cobb was educated at Dartmouth College and the Divinity School of Harvard University. He taught at Robert College at Constantinople from 1907 to 1910. Returning to America, he was successively on the faculty at St. John's College, Annapolis, Md., the Asheville School for Boys, and the U. S. Naval Academy. His most recent book, "The Way of Life of Wu Ming Fu," has been enthusiastically received by his many friends.

Chaplain Thirty Years Is Retired

Col. Alva Jennings Brasted, chaplain beloved and respected by thousands of soldiers whom he has served for more than 30 years, bade farewell to Fort Belvoir this week.

COL. BRASTED

In accordance with the recent War Department directive, he was retired from active duty September 30. He preached his farewell sermon last Sunday in Chapel One.

Chaplain Brasted, confronted with innumerable social, religious and domestic problems which soldiers brought with them from civilian life, or contracted in the service, maintained an open door policy to everyone. The legend on his office door is symbolic of the man himself:

"Don't knock. Come in!"

Colonel Brasted was born at Findley Lake, N. Y. on July 5, 1876. He is the son of Nathan Russell and Adaline (More) Brasted. He received his B. S. degree from Des Moines College in 1902 and his B. D. degree from the University of Chicago in 1905. On June 15, 1910, he married Miss Ada Crocker and is the father of three children.

He was ordained to the ministry by the Baptist Church in 1905. He had served as student pastor of the Wauconda, Ill. Baptist Church from 1902 to 1905. His other civilian pastorates include the Baptist Church at Lisbon, N. Dak., 1905 to 1910; the Baptist Church at Montevideo, Minn., 1910 to 1912; the Baptist Church at Fort Dodge, Iowa, 1912 to 1913.

The chaplain's military career actually began when he was a member of the National Guard of Iowa, serving in the ranks and rising to the grade of corporal. He entered the Chaplain Corps and was commissioned a first lieutenant on March 3, 1913.

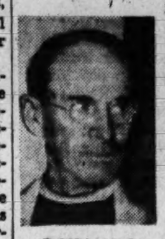
Episcopalians Await Capital Bishop Ruling

By Robert Tate Allan
The Post Church Editor

Decisions vitally affecting the status of the Washington Cathedral and relations between the Protestant Episcopal Church, the Washington Diocese and the Cathedral may be made at the general convention of the Episcopal Church opening today in Cleveland.



BOHANAN

The convention, which meets through October 11, will receive a report of "The Joint Committee to Consider the Matter of a See for the residing Bishop," appointed in 1937 by order of the general convention.

The Rev. Clyde Brown, Washington Diocesan Missioner, is secretary of the special committee, which will recommend that the Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church be relieved of Diocesan duties, that his headquarters be established in the District of Columbia, with a "house ond offices," and that he be given retirement at half pay.

The Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, also Bishop of Virginia, is now presiding bishop, and, under current church law, would retire under pension of only a diocesan bishop.

Meanwhile, Bishop Tucker has been given an official seat at the Washington Cathedral, but his headquarters and the offices of the National Episcopal Council are in New York City.

Evangelist Boothby Will Continue Lectures

"Is There Life on Worlds in the Sky?" will be the theme of the illustrated lecture at the Almas Temple, 13th and K sts. nw. tomorrow 7:30 p. m. Evangelist Robert L. Boothby will present this second picture lecture of the wonders of the stars and the glories surrounding these heavenly planets. Last Sunday night a capacity audience filled Almas Temple to hear Mr. Boothby in his opening lecture on the stars, and another large audience is expected tomorrow night.

2 Methodist Groups Will Open Schools for Christian Living

Warsaw 'Blitz' Survivor to Talk At One Project

Two prominent Methodist young adult groups will open "Schools For Christian Living" tomorrow night, with leaders from many fields of endeavor as speakers and discussion leaders.

The schools will be held at Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Church, First and Rhode Island ave. nw., and Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 9th and Massachusetts ave. nw.

Dr. Gaither P. Warfield, who had escaped death in the Warsaw "blitz" when he was Methodist missionary there, will address the worship service feature of the Rhode Island Avenue Church project tomorrow at 8 p. m. At 7 p. m., Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, Federation of Churches' executive secretary, will speak on "The Message of Jesus for Today"; Mrs. N. Gould Wickey of the Washington Council of Churchwomen, on "Christian Family Life"; the Rev. Francis W. McPeek, social welfare director, Federation of Churches, on "Christian Youth in Wartime Service," and Dr. Henry B. Wooding, pastor of Eckington Presbyterian Church, on "The Foundation of Personal Religious Living." A fellowship hour will be held each of the five Sundays from 6 to 7 p. m.

DR. WARFIELD

Mount Vernon School Starts

Young adults of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church will hold their school Sunday nights, tomorrow through November 21, inclusive. The program will include fellowship supper, 6 to 7 p. m.; interest courses, 7 to 8 p. m., and worship services, 8 to 9 p. m. Candlelight Communion will be a feature tomorrow at 8 p. m.

Among the discussion leaders and special speakers for the school and their topics will be Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University, and Walter A. Graham, Baltimore Conference director of young adult work, on "Postwar Problems"; Judge Ruth Thompson, former judge of Michigan's Probate Court, on "Problems of Juvenile Delinquency"; Edward P. Mangum, director of Mount Vernon Players, on "God's Stage," stressing influence of religion on drama; Dr. Robert M. Williams, pastor of Asbury Methodist Church, on "Race Relations"; Dr. Warren D. Bowman, Mrs. Gould Wickey and the Rev. Francis W. McPeek, oof Federal Council's Commission on Home and Marriage, on "Courtship and Marriage"; Talma Smith, reporter from House of Representatives, on "Teaching of Jesus on Human Relations," and Frank A. Calcutta Man to Talk

Swami Premananda of Calcutta, India, will address the Self-Realization Fellowship, 49th st. and Western ave. nw., tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "Divine Personality."

Letters Open Bible Classes Crusade

Thousands of letters have gone out this week to the city's strangers and others, inviting them to attend local and nearby Bible classes, as the membership crusade of the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association got under way.

STACKHOUSE

"Spark-plug" of the drive is George E. Harris, energetic executive vice president of the Bible Association, and member of Chevy Chase Methodist Church. In private life, he is a salesman for the Remington Rand Co.

According to Harris, one of the best bits of promotion for the crusade has been done by Howard M. Stackhouse of the Box Bible Class of Emory Methodist Church, 6100 Georgia ave. nw. Stackhouse has personally contacted hundreds of men in an effort to get them interested in Bible class activities.

Reception on Monday

A parish reception will be held Monday from 8 to 10 p. m. at Universalist National Memorial Church at 16th and S sts. nw. Dr. Seth R. Brooks, pastor, and Mrs. Brooks, with members of the board, will be in the receiving line.

Luther Leagues to Hold Rally

The Potomac Federation of Luther Leagues of the American Lutheran Church will hold its annual fall rally at Faith Lutheran Church, Lee Boulevard and Jackson Street, Arlington, tomorrow at 4 p. m.

In line with the program of evangelization being followed by the American Lutheran Church, the theme of the rally is "Tell the Story." A representative of the National Lutheran Council will explain the work of the Council and how it fits into the program of the Potomac Federation. The president and four project secretaries of the Federation will report on the International Convention held at Dubuque, Iowa, in August.

The rally will conclude with a songfest, tea and a social hour.

Two Guest Pastors Will Preach

The Rev. C. C. Hung of the Chinese Community Church, and Dr. Florian Vurpillot, pastor of the French Church, will participate tomorrow in the two communion services planned for world-wide Communion Day in the First Congregational Church.

"The Stars Came Out" will be the subject at 11 a. m. when Rev. Walter G. Borchers, jr., will preach and the Rev. Mr. Hung will assist at the communion table. At 8 p. m., which marks the resumption of evening services, Dr. Vurpillot will be guest preacher.

Tomorrow also marks the return to duty of the Washington A Cappella Choir, directed by Ruby Smith Stahl, which traces its organization to the time President Coolidge was a member of the First Church. The choir will sing at both services tomorrow.

Endeavorers Meet Monday

The District Christian Endeavor Union will hold its monthly meeting Monday at 8 p. m. at Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church, New Hampshire ave. and Randolph st. nw. The October endeavor theme is "Loyalties to Christ and to Country."

Participating in a panel discussion at the meeting will be Dorothy Beltz, Union citizenship chairman; Mrs. Gladys C. King, speaking as a citizen of the District of Columbia; Agnes Larish, yeoman 3d class, WAVES; Army Chaplain William B. Gamble and Wayne Buckle.

"DAY IS DYING IN THE WEST"
MARY A. LATHBURY
Day is dying in the west,
Heaven is touching earth with rest;
Wait and worship while the night
Sets her evening lamps alight
Through all the sky.
Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS
Mary Lathbury wrote this peaceful hymn of the vesper hour for a Chautauqua assembly—and now it is a favorite twilight hymn, not only of the Chautauqua group, but of congregations everywhere. With its soft and gentle movement, it pictures the world laying aside its cares after a busy day.

Institute Opens Oct. 6

Episcopal Churches in Alexandria are completing plans for a churchmen's institute for clergymen and laymen on Wednesday evenings beginning October 6. The seven meetings with the exception of a preaching mission at Christ Church, October 27, will be held at Grace Church, 209 South Patrick st., from 8 to 10 p. m.

Officers of the institute will be headed by the dean and chaplain, the Rev. Edward Randolph Welles, M. A., rector of Christ Church, who has announced that plans for the series include an hour's lecture each evening followed by division of the assembly into special interest groups for discussion.

Speakers from Virginia and Washington will deliver the addresses which are planned to be of interest to both priests and laymen. Those who wish to attend are asked to enroll by calling the institute registrar, Mrs. R. C. Moncure. She is religious education secretary of Christ Church and may be reached by telephone at Alexandria 1613. The registration fee for the institute is $1.

How Big is the Universe?
MORE MARVELOUS PICTURES OF THE STARS

See giant sun-stars hundreds of times larger than our earth; great island universes out beyond our milky way, which were once thought to be clouds of nebula, but are now known to be vast assemblages of sun-stars; star clusters with a million suns, many of the suns larger than our sun; map of North America in the sky; the moons on other planets, and many thrills too numerous to mention.

WILLIAM MAZO, Attorney 631 E St., N.W., Washington, D. C.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. Geophysical Development Corporation et al., plaintiff, vs. Wilfred H. Baird et al., defendant. Civil Action No. 18559. The object of this suit is to obtain a decree adjudging that Shelley Krasnow is the true original, first and sole inventor of an invention entitled "Method and Apparatus for Taking Physical Measurements in Boreholes" under his application bearing Serial No. 108312; that said Krasnow was denied the grant of Letters Patent as the result of the decision of the Board of Interference Examiners in Interference Action No. 78474 whereby one of the defendants herein, Lyle Dillon, was awarded priority of invention; that on March 31, 1941, in the said Interference proceedings, the said Board held that the defendants, Metzner, Weinstein and Baird were not the first inventors of the subject-matter at issue and the proceeding was terminated as to said Metzner, Weinstein and Baird. On motion of the plaintiff, it is this 25th day of September, 1943, ordered that the defendant, Wilfred H. Baird, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided, a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post before said day. EDWARD C. EICHER, Chief Justice. Attest: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By EMMA C. SIMPSON, Deputy Clerk. 2.9.16

SMALL VIRGINIA ESTATE FOR A SMALL FAMILY.
White Brick, California Rambler on 2 Picturesque Acres.

For particular small family interested in an unusual home in restricted surroundings, this charming white brick house, located in a neighborhood of estates in the Langley section of Virginia, will be of definite interest. Situated on 2 acres, completely fenced with an artistic white board fence, it affords the privacy and freedom of a country home but is within 7 miles of the White House, on bus transportation to Washington. With an interesting vista, it is beautifully landscaped with such plantings as holly, dogwood, spirea, elms, oaks, etc. Designed by one of Washington's outstanding architects, this home built under contract in 1939 contains many unusual features and is appealing attractively on both the exterior and the interior. Decorated in the Colonial manner, rooms include entrance hall with oversized coat closets, living room (17x23) with pine-paneled fireplace and built-in bookshelves, library (12x13) panelled in pine with adjoining half bath; 2 large bedrooms, each (13x17) with bath; dining room (12x14) with built-in corner cupboards and French doors opening on a large flagstone terrace; modern kitchen (10x12) equipped on 3 sides with Oxford cabinets, large pantry, first-floor laundry room (10x12), servants' wing of 2 rooms and bath, 2-car built-in garage. Features include mellowed random-width pine floors, rock wool insulation, slate roof, floodlights and white brick outdoor fireplace. Terms.
Price, $22,500.

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

I'VE GOT TO.... REPAIR THIS BRIDGE.... BEFORE IT FALLS...OR BE KNOWN FOREVER AS A TRAITOR!
AM I SEEING THINGS---OR IS SUPERMAN REALLY PUTTING THE BRIDGE TOGETHER AGAIN?!
BROTHER, WE'RE BOTH SEEING THINGS! HE'S DOING IT!
CALLING UPON HIS TREMENDOUS RESERVES OF SPEED AND STRENGTH, THE MAN OF STEEL ACTUALLY SUCCEEDS IN RESTORING THE SHATTERED SPAN OF THE GREAT BRIDGE....
THERE! PRACTICALLY AS GOOD AS NEW!
BUT THE STRAIN UPON ONE OF THE MAIN CABLES HAS BEEN TOO GREAT, AND----
-AND THAT, I'M AFRAID, DOES IT!
SNAP!

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Uplift League — By Milton Caniff

NOW THEN, THERE IS GREAT DISTRESS IN THE MINDS OF THE YANKEE FLY-MEN WHO FIGHT ON AND OVER THE SOIL OF CHINA...
EVEN SO! THE YELLOW-HAIR IS IN GRAVE TROUBLE! HE HAS BROKEN SOME RULE BY STALKING AN IRON BIRD OF THE LITTLE PEOPLE TO THE EAST!
THIS IRON BIRD FELL INTO A RIVER AND WAS NOT SEEN BY ANY OF OUR OWN COUNTRYMEN DEDICATED TO THAT TASK...THUS WE MUST SHARE THE YOUNG BIRD-BOY'S DESPAIR!
OUR FRIEND SPEAKS SENSE!
THAT IS SO!
SING, SON OF WANN, YOU PRESIDE OVER THE DWELLING OF THE YANKEE SOLDIERS OF THE SPACE FAMILY...YOU WILL GAIN KNOWLEDGE OF THIS PLACE WHERE THE HAPPY SINKING OCCURRED AND THEN...?
THEN WE SHALL RAISE THE FALLEN BIRD—AND HAVE THE DOUBLE PLEASURE OF PROVING THE STATEMENT OF THE YELLOW-HAIR—AND GAZING UPON SOME DWARF MEN WHO WILL BOMB CHINA NO MORE!

WHAT'S THE HOUR? MY WATCH HAS STOPPED.
IT'S EXACTLY EIGHTEEN PAST EIGHT
WHAT ARE YOU DOING? DON'T YOU BELIEVE ME?
JUST WANTED TO SEE FOR MYSELF
DO YOU THINK ID HAVE ANY OBJECT IN DECEIVING YOU?
NO, COURSE NOT. JUST WANTED TO SEE
WELL, BUT WHY DID YOU ASK ME THE TIME IF YOU WEREN'T PREPARED TO TAKE
OH, GEE! MY WORD? GOSH! I ONLY WANTED TO SEE FOR MYSELF, THAT'S ALL!

Pastor Marks Fifth Year At Bethesda

Special services tomorrow at the Bethesda First Baptist Church, commemorating World Communion Sunday, will also mark the fifth anniversary of the pastorate of Dr. J. Raymond Nelson, under whose leadership and with assistance of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention and of the community the house of worship at Wilson Lane and Melrose ave. was erected in 1940.

Principal speakers at the morning service, in which E. E. Bass, chairman of the board of deacons will preside, are Dr. Joseph T. Watts, general secretary Maryland Baptist Union Association, Baltimore, and Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary emeritus of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention.

In addition John J. H. Pool, F. Macon Mitchell, G. H. Myers and Mrs. B. M. Murrell will speak briefly representing various organizations of the church. The choir of which Mrs. George H. Price is director, will sing "Te Deum Laudamus" (Jackson). Lieut.-Comdr. M. H. Tinker is organist. A Scripture lesson will be read by John M. Wyman.

An anniversary tea in the church rooms at 5 o'clock will continue the day's special observance.

"I am the O-P-A!"

"IF you think that Price Control is something that belongs exclusively to Consumers and Retailers, you've got another guess coming. The Manufacturers of America have a stake in this war, too . . . and it's just as much our job as yours to keep prices in line. It's true we don't meet the public face to face, but it's our merchandise and our products that the public has to buy . . . and it's our responsibility to keep production costs within bounds . . . so that the things you pay your money for represent dollar-for-dollar value. If we don't keep a firm and patriotic hand on the reins, the whole economic machine can strip the gears. That's why the Manufacturers of America are really honorary directors of the OPA. It's up to us to make certain, in every way we can, that civilian-goods are bought and sold at fair and legal prices . . . that chiseling and black-marketing are not permitted to throttle our nation's war effort . . . and that the destructive forces of Inflation will never get a foothold in America. We're all in this war together . . . consumers, retailers and manufacturers alike . . . the OPA belongs to us . . . not to Uncle Sam . . . and it's up to us to make it work."

AN OPEN MESSAGE TO THE CITIZENS OF WASHINGTON

The Home Front Pledge Campaign, now in progress, is an earnest call to you to cooperate with the Office of Price Administration in its program of fair prices and a fair share of goods for all Americans. During this campaign you will be called upon to pledge not to pay more than top legal prices and not to buy rationed goods without ration stamps. Keeping this pledge will mean your active participation in this important O. P. A. program. We in the O. P. A., as part of this wartime community, pledge our complete support to this campaign. With your wholehearted cooperation our goals will be achieved.

Robert K. Thompson,
District Director,
Office of Price Administration

HERE ARE THE THINGS WE ALL MUST DO:

1. Pay no more than top legal prices.
2. Accept no rationed goods without giving up ration stamps
3. When I question any price, I will talk it over with my dealer, and if I am not satisfied, I will take my receipt to the Price Clerk of my War Price and Ration Board.
4. I will buy only what I absolutely need, so that valuable machines and labor can be used to make airplanes, tanks and guns.
5. I will volunteer my few extra hours a week to serve at my War Price and Ration Board, helping to make price control and rationing a success in my neighborhood.
6. I will help others to know their responsibilities in wartime buying and will express my disapproval, as a citizen, whenever I hear of BLACK MARKET trading in my neighborhood; and I will refuse to trade where I must break the rules.
7. I will back the attack to the best of my ability through regular purchases of war bonds and stamps.
